SANTIAGO DE CHILE, Monday, Dec. 14, 1863.

Since the horrible loss of life in the earthquake at Mendoza, nothing has approached in mournfulness the spectacle presented to-day by the magnificent capital of Chile. By the conflagration of the Jesuit Church on the evening of the 8th inst., more than one thousand victims were suddenly hurried into eternity, by the most fearful of all possible deaths, that of fire. It were impossible to exaggerate the horror of the scene—it cannot even be described; and although an eyewitness of the terrible reality, I feel how utterly impossible it is to convey in language an idea of the heart-rending spectacle of Tuesday evening.

It has been the custom for the past five years to celebrate the "month of Mary" with great zeal and pomp, in the Church of the Company, or Jesuit Church, situated at the corner of the street of that name and Bandera-street, and fronting the plazuela of la Compañía. The curate having organized a religious association, known as the "Daughters of Mary," has held vespers services during said month, winding up upon the 8th with a grand illumination of the Church and sermon in the evening, at which all the members were earnestly entreated to be present.

This year, determined to outshine all former exhibitions, he made arrangements to adorn the church with garlands of flowers, colossal statues, and with an unprecedented number of lights. He was vainly remonstrated with by the Archbishop and others in authority, who reluctantly gave their consent to the display. The church was filled with the devout all day, and towards nightfall a continuous stream of human beings, almost exclusively women, poured into the church until every avenue was densely packed, and the aisles of the church and far out into the plaza were filled with a hushed and kneeling crowd.

The doors were then all closed, save the main entrance, for the double purpose of preventing the confusion occasioned by late comers and of making the voice of the preacher more distinctly heard. At a little before seven, the assistants began lighting up the church and were just finishing the grand altar, the rest of the building being fully illuminated with thousands of lamps, some of them of paraffine oil, which, even in transparent contrast, of the foot of the statue of the Virgin, burst forth a jet of flame. The attendant endeavored to extinguish it with his poncho, but the inflammable liquid penetrated the fabric and only increased the danger. In a moment the flames darted up the garlands of artificial flowers to the roof, the immense canvas caught fire and the hangings, suspended from the roof by strings dropped and spread among the densely packed mass of worshippers. In a moment the whole church was ablaze, the flames spreading with lightning rapidity, and the terrified people, crushed together in the narrow aisles, vainly hurled to the furnace of timber, they found the doors, which blocking outwardly the whole church of the church and rolled down in huge billows upon the crowded street, which had hitherto poured the main current. During the first few moments of surprise and horror shrieks of agony for the destruction of their belovered church resounded through the aisles of the building; but, when rushing to the various outlets, all were found closed save one and that one impossible, then storms of horror burst from the departing multitude. For a few moments the heart-piercing cries of agonizing women were harrowing; they gradually grew fainter and fainter, and soon an awful silence reigned within that terrible furnace, broken only by the angry roar of the flames, or the crash of falling timbers. By the lurid glare within could be seen hundreds of human forms, some with hands elevated in prayer to Him before whose throne they were rapidly hastening, others with eyes eagerly strained and hands outstretched towards the outside world, imploring that assistance that it was impossible to give; mothers clasping their little ones close and striving to shield their darlings from the flames already blistering their own despairing features; children clinging in the frenzy of despair to those who would have gladly died for them, but could only die with them.

The news spread rapidly through the city, and, in an incredibly short space of time, our Minister, Mr. Stimson, Dr. Sayer, American Consul at Valparaiso, Messrs. Nixon, and his nephew, Hamilton M. Kerr, W. Rudge, Steam Cutter, U. T. Francis, and a number of other Americans, were upon the spot, hewing down doors and rushing into the flames to drag out the poor wretches previously to the doors rendered it possible to reach them. Don Clauzio Matteucci, Don Gregorio Gazitua, and D. Antonio Gazon, ex-minister of Chile, also aided in the good work, but the majority of the bystanders, paralyzed by the dreadful sight, stood aloof, while the foreigners, at the most imminent risk of life, dragged out the living, the maimed and the dead, until the falling timbers and mass of fire from above extinguished every hope of saving another victim. The most extraordinary escapes marked the duration of these noble spirits, who, unmindful of the deadly ceiling within the church, never ceased their exertions, until it was but too evident that not one soul remained alive of all that multitude.

The ordinary project to take the most ordinary precautions against fire, or even alarm, has been shamefully neglected. Of the 2,000 persons within the pile, but five, or six, hundred escaped, and most of them wounded, scorched and naked. The rest became wedged together, and in frenzy with heat, terror and pressure, lost the ability to help themselves or second the efforts of those who risked their lives to save them. It was only by almost superhuman effort that some few were dragged from the tightly packed mass of human beings at the hastily opened outlets; and of these few, a great majority only lived a few hours.

The survivors, approaching too nearly the dense mass of victims, were time and again seized by the outstretched hands of numbers, and only saved by their own desperate struggles, aided by their companions from behind. But who could withstand the imploring gestures of those who, upon the very threshold of salvation, saw a fearful and agonizing death swiftly approaching? Inside the church, and within a few steps of the main door fronting upon the plaza, was a group of perhaps two hundred, from the white-haired and venerable woman to the infant of tender years. On the right hand knelt a beautiful girl of some seventeen years, as yet untouched by the ceiling flames that poured down from above, and by her side her sister and mother, locked in each other's arms, within the reach of those without, who ever and anon dashed recklessly through the scorching doorway, and ineffectually grasped the clothing or limbs of the nearest. Writhing with terror, the horrible group swayed to and fro, the weaker gradually sinking forward and falling, never to rise again, while the stronger battled with desperate energy to reach the saving hands that struggled so desperately to reach them. But all was in vain, and in an awfully brief space of time the wall of flame became impassable; the entire floor of the church was a sea of fire, fed by the clothing of the victims and intensified by the dropping lamps. The roof fell in, the towers followed; and the belfry, with an awful crash, fell across the doorway, burying the scorched and hissing bodies of those whose suffering was over.

The scene without the church was heart-rending. The streets were filled with the dead and dying, and hundreds rushed frantically to and fro, calling upon the names of loved ones; some knelt in the streets to pray, some were carried off by their friends, raving in their grief, while some, distracted at the thought of wife or child perishing, rushed frantically into the church and were seen no more. Hundreds were taken to the hospitals and to the neighboring private houses. All the physicians of the city were upon the spot, ministering to the injured. At midnight the flames, spent for want of material to feed upon, had lowered, and by morning had entirely ceased. The spectacle, by the glaring light of day, was indescribably horrible. Two thousand corpses, in every stage of carbonization, from blackened cinder to the slightest scorch, lay in heaps around the several exit doors, the last struggle painfully visible in the exact position, the outstretched hands, the staring eye-balls. The upper portions of the bodies were, with few exceptions, disfigured beyond recognition—the lower extremities were scarcely touched by the flames.

The officiating priests, although as heavily incumbered as the women with clothing, succeeded in escaping, without a single exception, and the same paper which published to-day a list of over 2,000 victims whose names are known, gives also a list of church ornaments and plate rescued, valued at thousands of dollars! From the vestry a door opened into the church, whence the priests escaped—and one of this morning's papers states, upon the authority of persons on the spot, that the door was then closed, lest the fire should penetrate the vestry and destroy the church property therein! Certain it is, that three rooms in a neighboring palatial mansion are filled with furniture, carpets, curtains and pictures, saved from the vestry, while a few paces beyond were perishing, in frightful torture, hundreds of frail and helpless human beings, many of whom could have found safety through that door.

Lest it be wondered at that the fire was allowed to gain such headway, I may mention that Santiago, a city of a hundred thousand inhabitants, possesses but three engines, all out of order and badly managed, fires being extremely rare. Soon after the alarm had been given a company of regulars arrived, and with fixed bayonets, was stationed around the building, not only impeding access to it but driving back those who implored to be allowed to continue their exertions. A Mr. Jaime Dunzius, upon being called by name by one of his subtrees, fainted upon entering the church, and received a bayonet wound for his gallantry.

The papers are filled with incidents of the catastrophe. One young lady, finding all hope of escape cut off, tied her handkerchief tightly round her knee. In the morning her body was discovered charred about the head and shoulders beyond all recognition; but the precaution she had taken identified her—her name being in the corner of the handkerchief.

It is announced this afternoon that but seven bodies have been recognized out of more than 2,000 victims!

Seven dwellings have been closed and sealed by the authorities—not one soul having returned of either of the families living therein.

Deep and loud is the indignation manifested by the people of the public at the criminal indifference of the priesthood to the safety of their congregation, and the Government has been expostulated beseeched to raze the ruins of the ill-fated "Company" to the ground, and to forbid in future the illumination of churches, or night services. The priests rebel, and insist upon rebuilding the ill-fated pile, which, upon Tuesday last, was for the third time destroyed by fire. Public indignation is rising and threats have been publicly made that, if the authorities do not demolish the baleful walls, the people will do it for them.

I am conscious how feebly the foregoing details portray the horrible scene of torture it was my misfortune to witness. No human pen could possibly convey the awful reality—no language could depict the heart-rending nature of the spectacle. Santiago is to-day a city of mourning—the entire Republic is a partaker in her grief. SIDNEY.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

PANAMA, Friday, Jan. 8, 1864.

The British steamship Callao arrived at Panama, from Valparaiso and intermediate ports, on the evening of the 6th. She brings nearly a million of dollars, principally for England, a portion of the money being the depreciated Bolivian currency used in Peru, and which is sent forward to be received, or to be exchanged for the better coinage lately decreed by the Government of Peru. Consul Wenzow, of Paita, on his way to Washington, was a passenger on the Callao. The dates from Valparaiso and Santiago de Chile are to the 17th ult., and from Lima and Callao to the 28th.

The Callao brings us the details of the most terrible tragic event of the last thousand years—THE BURNING IN SANTIAGO OF TWENTY-TWO TO TWENTY-FIVE HUNDRED WOMEN AND CHILDREN, one to 800 of whom were the elite of the Chilian capital. I quote from the Santiago and Valparaiso dailies, put principally from the Mercurio. I have added some translations from the papers printed entirely in Spanish, of facts and incidents. I inclose you a list of 2,072 persons known to have been burned. It will be seen that Hon. Thomas Nixon, United States Minister, and other Americans, are specially praised for their energetic efforts to save the lives of the unfortunates. The priests come in for terrible anathemas from most of the journals. In fact, the iron grasp of the priesthood in Chile at the throats of its victims has been so loosened, that many seem to entertain hopes that the people will find they have not suffered in vain in this terrible disaster.

Santiago is the capital of Chile, and contains 110,000 inhabitants. Mixed marriages of Catholics and Protestants are not sanctioned by ecclesiastical law, and the priests have always had pretty much their own way in the whole of the Republic, except in Valparaiso, where foreigners have much influence. Of the children born in Santiago, one-fifth are illegitimate, but this is probably no larger proportion than in most purely Catholic countries.

THE CATASTROPHE.

A catastrophe gigantic, horrible, unexampled in the annals of our country and perhaps of the world, has absorbed every one's mind for many days past. We will use the utmost brevity in relating the calamity to our foreign readers.

Ever since the newly invented mystery of the Immaculate Conception of Mary was declared at Rome, in 1857, the Church of the Company, formerly belonging to the Jesuits, had become the focus of devotion of a vast Sisterhood called the Daughters of Mary, in which, on payment of so much a year, almost all the women of our capital were enrolled.

Every year, from the 8th of November to the 8th of December, the day of the Immaculate Conception, lasted a splendid festival in which orchestral music, singing and an astonishing prodigality of incense, of lights of oil, liquid gas, wax and every luminous combustible in the world, gilttered and flared in every part, in the cornices, in the ceiling and particularly on the high altar. Every night the church blazed with a sea of flame and fluttered with clouds of muslin and gauze draperies. It could only be lighted up in time by beginning in the middle of the afternoon and the work of extinguishing was only ended when the night was far advanced. In 1862 they thought of adopting hydrogen gas, but the engineer's plan, though convenient and safe, was rejected.

A priest named UZANZE, whose mind mariolatry had marked for its own, headed that Sisterhood from the beginning and worked his way down to such a depth of superstition that one of his least extravagances was the invention of a Celestial Post-office trick, by which the Daughters of Mary might correspond with the Virgin in writing. At the entrance of the temple the Virgin's letter-box was constantly open, and there persons of a robust faith deposited in sealed letters their wishes and their prayers. Every Wednesday that letter-box for Eternity was placed before the high altar, and UZANZE, who acted as postman between the Mother of God and her daughters, exhibited to the Divinity those offerings, of course keeping that singular correspondence to himself. This same mountebank got up a religious raffle for the favor of the Virgin—in a recent instance two prizes being drawn by a skeptical Minister of State, and a woman whose character was not sublime. The old times of pagan idolatry had resuscitated in the centre of exaggerated catholicism.

The church of the Company, built the latter half of the seventeenth century, possessed a spacious nave, but a roof that dated only from 15 years ago, of painted timber. The only door of easy access to the congregation was the principal one in the centre, the small doors leading into the aisles being opened only half way, and obstructed by screens. Near the high altar there was a little door communicating with the sacristy.

A few minutes before 7 o'clock in the evening of Tuesday, the 8th of December, more than 5,000 women and a few hundred men knelt in that church, crammed to overflowing. However, that did not prevent a compact mass of fanatics from attempting to fight their way in from the steps, because it was the last night of the Month of Mary, and no one could bear to lose the closing sermon of the priest UZANZE, who always succeeded by his exciting declamations in drowning in tears that place so soon to be a sea of fire. Then ESZAGUIRRA, the apostolic Nuncio and favorite of PIUS IX., the founder of the American college at Rome, was to preach also. It is said that UZANZE, wounded in his feelings as chaplain of the "Daughters of Mary," because ESZAGUIRRA had told him that the illuminations of his church could not be compared with what he had seen in Rome, exclaimed with enthusiasm, "I will give him when he comes to preach, such an illumination as the world has never seen!" Nobody can deny that UZANZE has kept his word!

Indeed, the lighting of all the lamps and candles had hardly finished, when the liquid gas in a transparency on the high altar, set on fire its woodwork and wrapped in flame a kind of tabernacle, wholly composed of canvas, pasteboard and wood. In less than two minutes the altar, about 33 yards high and 10 broad, was an unextinguishable bonfire.

The advance of the fire was perhaps even more rapid than the panic of the audience. When the fire had flown from the altar to the roof, the whole flock of derelicts rushed to the principal door. Those near the lateral doors were able to escape at the first alarm; others, and particularly the men, gained the little door of the sacristy; and lastly, those near the chief outlet forced their way through the throng, even still struggling to get in, and, indeed, part of which did get in, even in the face of the fire, stimulated by the desire of getting a good place, which, on this occasion, meant a good place to die in. Then, the dames having crept along the whole roof, and, consequently, released the lamps of oil and liquid gas from the coveness to which they were strung, a rain of liquid, blue fire poured down upon the entangled throngs below.

A new and more horrible conflagration broke out then in that dense living mass, appalling the affrighted gaze with pictures tenfold more awful than those wherein the Catholic imagination has labored to give an idea of the tortures of the damned. In less than a quarter of an hour about two thousand human beings had perished, including many children, but very few men.

Although many heroic men performed prodigies of daring and strength, in tearing some from the death-grasp of the phalanx of death that choked the door, in some cases literally tearing off their arms, without being able to extricate them, the number of the saved by this means falls short of fifty. More than five hundred persons of our highest society have perished—the greater part young girls of 15 to 20 years. One mother has perished with her five daughters. Two-thirds of the victims were servants, and there are many houses in which not one has escaped. Several houses have been noted by the police as empty, because all its inhabitants have perished.

The people think of nothing but the victims and their obsequies. All with one voice demand the demolition of the ruinous walls of the fatal temple and the offering of a monument to the dear memory of the martyrs. The Municipal body solicited this by the medium of a commission on the 12th, and the Government is resolved on compliance. Resistance is threatened on the part of the clergy, but such exasperating and indecorous folly would infallibly call forth a general rising of the people.

The past fortnight has produced no other occurrences worth chronicling, and even if it had, they would not seem deserving of mention in this night of heavy anguish.

During the last week the tribunals and the Government itself have suspended their labors.

The people only weep, and their public writers could only offer tears to the nation's mourning.

THE LATEST NEWS.

SANTIAGO, Dec. 14, 1863.

EVENTS OF THE DAY.—Before 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the hour appointed to petition the President of the Republic for the demolition of the walls of the Church of the Company, a numerous and silent meeting of all the social classes had collected in the open space in front of the ruins. The decree, of demolition having been signed by His Excellency Don GUILLERMO MATTA ascended to the upper story of the Congress House and thence addressed the people, reading the decree promulgated a few hours before, and calling for a vote from His Excellency, which was enthusiastically given by the immense assembly that filled the square.

The orator proceeded then to protest, in the name of religion and humanity, against those who attempted to quality as sacrilegious the people's longing for the demolition. To wreak its revenge on us, he added, superstition tries to lash and goad the ignorant passions of the rabble into violence; but its feeble efforts are in vain, because we have never strayed from the great principles of pure religion. Fanaticism spreads its murky pall against the happiness and peace of society. Let us quench its firebrands with the sincerity and nobleness of our intentions.

THE OFFERING UP OF THE EVENING SACRIFICES.

A dreadful visitation has fallen upon us.

Truly this is "a day of trouble and rebuke and blasphemy." The voice of lamentation is heard all over the land, the bitter weeping of fathers, husbands and lovers, for those who were the joy and brightness of their life, that refuses to be comforted, because they are not.

Hundred of young girls—only yesterday radiant and beautiful in the luxuriant bloom of the fresh hopeful spring of life—to-day calcined, hideous corpses, horrible, loathsome to the sight, impossible to be recognized.

The 8th of December was a great triumph for the clergy of the church of the Jesuits in Santiago. An enthusiastic audience filled every nook. There were hardly any men there, but 2,000 women, comprising the flower of the beauty and fashion of the capital, were at the feet of the ecclesiastics, very many against the will of fathers and husbands—but that, of course, only showed forth the power and might of the Gospel.

Never had such pyrotechny been seen before—20,000 lights, mostly camphene, in long festoons of colored globes, blazed the church into a hall of fire.

But the performance had not yet begun when the crescent of fire at the foot of the gigantic image of the Virgin over the high altar overflowed, and climbing up the muslin draperies and pasteboard devices to the wooden roof, rolled a torrent of flame.

The suddenness of the fire was awful.

The dense mass of women, frightened out of their senses—numbers fainting, and all entangled by their long swelling dresses—rushed, as those who knew that death was at their heels, to the one door, which soon became choked up. Fire was everywhere. Streaming along the wooden ceiling, it flung the paraffine lamps, hung in rows there, among the struggling women. In a moment the gorgeous church was a sea of fire. MURILLO, ANGELO's fearful picture of hell was there, but exceeded.

Help was all but impossible. A Hercules might have strained his strength in vain to pull one from the serried mass of frenzied wretches who piled one above another as they climbed over to reach the air, wildly fastened the gripe of death upon any one escaping, in order that they might be dragged out with them. Those who longed to save them were doomed to bear the most harrowing sight that ever seared human eyeballs.

To see mothers, sisters, tender and timid women, dying that dreadful death that appals the stoutest heart of man, within one yard of salvation, within one yard of men who would have given their lives over and over again for them. It was maddening—the screaming and wringing of hands for help as the remorseless flames came on; and then—save when some already dead with fright were burnt in ghastly indifference—their horrible agony, some in prayer, some tearing their hair and battering their faces.

Women seized in the embrace of the flames were seen to undergo a transformation as though by an optical delusion—first dazzling brightly—then horribly lean and shrunk up—then black statues rigidly fixed in a writhing attitude.

The fire imprisoned by the immense thickness of the walls, had devoured everything combustible by 10 o'clock. Then, defying the sickening stench, people came to look for their lost ones.

Oh, what a sight the fair, placid moon looked down upon! Close-packed crowds of calcined, distorted forms wearing the fearful expression of the last pang, whose smile was once a heaven—the ghastly phalanx of black statues twisted in every variety of agony, stretching out their arms, as imploring mercy—and then of the heap that had choked up the door, multitudes with the lower parts perfectly untouched, and some all a shapeless mass but with one arm or foot unscathed.

The silence, after these piercing screams were hushed in death, was horrible. It was the silence of the grave, unbroken but by the bitter wail or fainting cry.

Two thousand souls had passed through that ordeal of fire to the judgment-seat of God.

Heroic acts of sublime daring have not been wanting. Enduring gratitude has been excited in every Chilian heart by the gallant efforts of Mr. NIXON, the Minister of the United States, his countryman Mr. MATTOS, and several other foreigners. There were generous men who defied the fury of the flames to save lives, and some of them died martyrs to their noble hearts. An Englishman or an American, it is unknown which, was seen to rush through the flames, to raise in his powerful arms a lady, stride with her a little way, and then his hair in a blaze and choked with smoke, fall back into the volcano never to rise again. A young lady named OSSULA, having in vain implored some bystanders on her knees to save her mother, rushed in and shortly afterward miraculously issued forth bearing her glorious load.

A young lady by the name of Solar, just before the smoke suffocated her, had the presence of mind to knot her handkerchief round her leg, so that her corpse might be recognized.

The population of Santiago as supine and as priest-ridden is fired with indescribable indignation at the monstrous conduct of the priests. The public conscience holds them guilty of the death of all these victims—and especially the mountebank UZANZE, the inventor of the Virgin's Post-office imposture, because by collecting together all the material most likely to produce a fire—a countless number of lights, pasteboard scenery and muslin hangings admitting a vast crowd—and covering the one door open, with a screen, they took every pains to bring about this tragedy. When the fire broke out and people were escaping by the sacristy, they blocked up this door, to devote themselves the more undisturbedly to saving their grim-cracks. The list of things saved makes one's blood run cold. What the priests saved, what they have put away in cigar-shops and the houses in front are a great image, some wooden saints, a sacred scyphe or two, some books, chalices, silver candlesticks, and a great deal of sacred matting and carpet.

After saving their trash, these specimens of the good shepherds that give their life for their sheep, fire away in company with the owls and bats that infested the ancient walls, except that one priest favored the agonizing victims with his absolution, and Uguita requested them to "die happy, because they went direct to Mary." They then forsook the scene, and in that awful night, when fainting women and desperate men strewed the streets, and writhing forms that a few hours ago were graceful and beautiful sentiment, incensed and died in chemists' shops, not a priest was to be seen to whisper a word of Christ's comfort to the dying ear, or hold the precious crucifix before the glazing eye.

No, not one—for the priest of Nature was there—Woman—a ministering angel in the dark hour, tender and soothed as usual. One young lady—God bless her! tore up all her outer-clothing to make bandages, and bound up the wounds as only woman can. All this awful night the only thing like consolation of the clergy was the incessant tolling of bells, about the only thing they could do to increase the horrors of the scene.

This being the third time that this church has filled our homes with weeping, all with one voice demand that it never should be rebuilt, but the priests, faithfully defiant and despotic as ever, threaten to let off their miserable mediæval pop-guns at those they term the sacrilegious alienators of holy ground.

Their audacity has even led them to attempt an appeal to violence.

On the 11th, they appeared on the scene to take possession of the blackened ruins and instill public opinion by drawing masses for the souls whose bodies they had destroyed, but the sentinels drove them off with the butt ends of their muskets.

The Government has shown no energy, and one minister is unhappily a creature of the clergy, but the people, in whose hearts, as having wives and daughters, there dwells an idea of right—something from God, that priest-ridden has not succeeded in preventing—have been in earnest, and the Government has had to follow and yield to pressure. The decree has gone forth, and not one stone of that accursed church shall be left on another.

The public contempt and horror of these priests increase with their insolence and inhumanity.

They preach that the irreparable loss of so many of the fairest and most virtuous of Chile's virgins and matrons is a special mercy and miracle of Mary, who wished to take them at once without delay to her bosom. One monster exults openly at that which has stamped eternal grief and horror on our hearts, "Because Chile needed a supply of saints and martyrs!"

Oh! as we write our eyes fill with tears—nothing can console us in this affliction—we can think of nothing else but our loss—of those who never will come back to us; but still there will have cannot some good if the dark degrading domination of the priests has melted away in the smoke of that awful burnt sacrifice, which, laden with the dying breath of 2,000 victims, rolled up to accuse UZANZE and his accomplices of murder, before the throne of God.

BURNING OF THE CHURCH OF THE JESUITS.

One of those awful visitations which, from time to time, afflict nations with eternal mourning, took place on Tuesday, Dec. 8; the festival of the Immaculate Conception, in what was the church of the Jesuits in the capital. A magnificent temple reduced to ashes, hundreds of dear lives sacrificed, the whole city weeping its lost ones—such is the picture Santiago offers since the fatal night of Dec. 8—the anniversary of another mortal catastrophe—the battle of Longomilla.

On the commemoration of the Immaculate Conception, the last of the festivities of the Month of Mary, the most popular and frequented of all our solemnities, thousands of fair devotees thronged to the last performance which was to close all that had preceded. At six in the evening the spacious nave and part of the open space before the church swarmed with ladies in veils, frantically struggling to enter a temple where not one more could be made room for.

A few minutes before 7, and when the religious performance was about to commence, they were still lighting the gas lights in the channel, when the portable gas in the half-moon of canvas and wood, that formed the pedestal of a colossal image of the Virgin Mary, began to burn one of the extremities of that apparatus. Some one rushed upon the rising flame, and succeeded in smothering it, but, by a fatal rebound, the gas, compressed by the effort, burst out with redoubled vigor at the other extremity of the fatal half-moon. Immediately a fierce flame rushed up. The persons who thronged the chancel flew toward the sacristy, crying "Water! water!" whilst the women who filled the nave arose in tumultuous confusion, screaming for help.

The fire spread with wonderful rapidity in the recesses of wood and hangings, and thence, attracted by the current of air that always circulates between the upper boarding and the roof, rolled through the church. In a few moments the ceiling was a cloud of fire.

In the meantime, the men had succeeded in escaping, for in this church the sexes were separated by an iron grating, and the women had fled as far as the middle of the church, in the midst of the most fearful confusion. But the heading hurry, the fainting, the obstruction of the bell-shaped dresses and the frantic eagerness to gain the street, formed an impenetrable barrier before the two doors, which alone, by a culpable imprudence, gave access to the free air towards the open place in front, and the small court of the west side of the church.

That obstacle was the barrier of death!

And now what appeared most horrible was, that stating the salvation of lives within reach of our arms, it was impossible to save even one of the victims piled up, one upon another on the very threshold. Hardly had the noble men who devoted themselves to save some lives, at peril of their own, seized by the arms or the clothes a prostrate form, than the other women, wild with terror and the madness of the fire, clutched the victim about to be saved, and in some cases dragged those who came to help them into that fiery vortex. It was almost impossible to rescue even one from that heap of imploring wretches and under that ghastly knot. But the fire accomplished that which baffled man; and the passage into the consumed church was not cleared until that impenetrable phalanx of persons, beautiful late was a handful of cinders. The catastrophe is horrible—most cruel. At midnight we visited the smoking ruins of the fatal temple, as upon a silent charnel-house, and, by the light of the lantern, every step showed to the gaze fearful groups of carbonized corpses that preserved still the supplication or despairing attitude of their frightful martyrdom. Although there are events beyond the foresight of man, and beyond, also, his responsibility, we must admit that there has been the most culpable recklessness; religion among us has been turned into an intoxicating mania, new-fangled mummeries have replaced Christian worship—and, thanks to one species of fanaticism fanned by others, the religious world crowds with a kind of frenzy to these performances whose splendor is estimated by the multitude of lights, that is to say, the multitude of perils accumulated every night.

We demand that this terrible lesson be taken to heart! No more night services! No more disorder, no more immorality, no more religious mobs of crazy people crowding to push and fight their way into the fashionable churches, under the delusion that they are performing a religious feat of merit, instead of committing an act of disgusting irreverence. We demand from this very day that all the churches be shut up on the disappearance of the light of day—the safeguard of all order—of all safety—and in particular of all public morality, attacked a thousand times over by those disgusting scenes which especially, in our most solemn festivals, are the subject of the just complaint, the indignant condemnation of all respectable people.

Let the local authority interfere in the police of the churches, as regards their construction and their apparatus for lighting. In what church, owing to the reckless use of a multitude of lights in connection with shrouds of gauze and towering fabricants of painted card-board, are there not at least once a year alarms of fire?

Dictate regulations that shall avoid confusion, and the acquaintance of many spectators that the place will hold, that shall facilitate the speedy evacuation of every church, that shall guarantee even tranquillity and security—in one word secure according to the practice of all civilized nations, and not converting in these atrocious religious auntes that palmed our women.

If there is anything that people execrate century

it is fanaticism, the most energetic of monkish Rome in the ground that saint temple, which fortunately is the property of the State, that its ashes twice in the space of twenty years blackened with the smoke of calamities that have carried desolation and mourning throughout the nation, evoke, with the power of a horrible memory, in every family the shade of a loved victim.

With a heart rent by so great an affliction we send forth to all our country—to all America—the wail of this mighty sorrow.

God receive it in His great mercy, and may He who wipes all tears from all eyes send down some little comfort for those who weep a mother or a child!

CORRESPONDENCE

BETWEEN THE LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE SECRETARY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS OF CHILI ON THE SUBJECT OF THE CATASTROPHE.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, SANTIAGO, CHILE, Dec. 11, 1863.

To His Excellency the Secretary for Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Chili:

SIR: I have the honor to address myself to your Excellency, to express on behalf of the American residents in Chili, and on my own, our profound and earnest sympathy in the terrible catastrophe which, on Tuesday last, befell this city, bringing desolation and grief into so many families and mourning into the heart of the entire community.

The Government and people whom I represent will be stricken with the deepest sorrow when the sad tidings reaches them.

A calamity so appalling and horrible has no parallel in the world's history. May He who numbers the tears of the stricken hearts in mercy console the bereaved, the afflicted, and may the woeful chastisement of His providence not result in a more severe calamity of the national mind by of contrast or comparison to obey His mandates.

I have the honor to remain to Your Excellency the assurances of the high estimation and personal esteem with which I remain, Your Excellency's obedient servant,

THOMAS H. NIXON.

(REPLY.)

SANTIAGO, Dec. 11, 1863.

SIR: I have had the honor to receive the note which your Excellency was pleased to address me yesterday, expressing to me the sentiments of the American citizens Your Excellency represents, in relation to the terrible calamity which befell the city of Santiago on Tuesday the 8th inst., which has carried grief into the midst of many families, and has covered the entire community with mourning.

Your Excellency likewise informs me that the Government and people represented by your Excellency will feel the deep sorrow which the news of the catastrophe, and your Excellency concludes by expressing the hope that the Lord may grant consolation to the afflicted and unprotected, and cause us all to view with the uncertainty of life, to be ever prepared to obey the behest of Providence.

My Government has learned the bereaving with deep gratitude, and has discovered in your Excellency's communication, an alleviation of the grief with which it has been afflicted by this public calamity, as well as a new evidence of the fraternal sentiments which animate your Excellency and your country towards the people and in favor of our Republic. The sympathy and sentiments which your Excellency and your Legation have displayed on Tuesday last, in saving the unfortunate victims from the frightful fire, and already won the gratitude of my Government, which has been revived by the present manifestation.

I have communicated the foregoing to Your Excellency's country with a special request that the President of the Republic, to express the honorable sentiments of the citizens of the United States who have taken part in our public mourning, that the noble conduct displayed by them upon this sad occasion will be ever gratefully remembered by the Chilian people and Government.

With your Excellency to present to accept the assurances of my most distinguished consideration and regard, with which I am

Your Excellency's most obedient servant,

MANUEL ANTONIO TOCORNAL.

To the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States.

Our correspondent forwards a list of 2,072 names, but our space is too limited to admit its publication. Besides, there, it is calculated that three or four hundred have perished, whose names are not known, or which have not been given.

The victims are all to be placed in an immense tomb, and a marble monument is to be erected over them.

The excitement against the priests in Chili, and especially in Santiago, is said by persons who have come to Panama, to be intense, and may yet break out in violence, as their heartless acts come more clearly to the light. It is without dispute that the priests who occupied the church and altars, pushed back the women, who were crowding to the doors, in order that they might have a better chance of saving their old mamparas, gilt images, holy robes, sacred chairs, and other dirty traps.

Among the thirty persons named as the most energetic in their efforts to save life and heading the list, are—Samuel Merliano, Esq., Juan Vicente Alsa, Henry Meiggs, Thos. H. Nelson, United States Minister to Chili; Mr. Rand, his Secretary; Mr. Hively, United States Consul at Valparaiso, and Don Cornelio Galle. Mr. HAVELAND is a son of the late Sarah HAVELAND, of Boston, the latter having been a resident of Buenos Ayres and Chili 40 years previous to his death. Mr. MEIGGS, of San Francisco, California, was the contractor for building the Valparaiso and Santiago Railroad.

The Mercurio has the following in its typical columns:

"Among the telegraphic orders that of the opulent Señora Doña EZAGUIRRE, who perished in the flames, and who leaves over $100,000. This lady lived with her brother, that noble gentleman Don José MANUEL EZAGUIRRE, who lost the whole of his fortune by indorsements in the cause of this. The family of Señor EZAGUIRRE were thus composed: the lady in question, daughter of Don Ignacio, who should fall to her nephew. It turns out that the lawyer goes off to the Sandwich Islands, in Europe, without a place to other establishment, leaving only $4,000 to her brother. The nephew of the lady was Mercedes EZAGUIRRE, the Director and founder of the Sociedad Americana in Santiago. Comment is unnecessary."

Of the 2,000 persons who lost their lives, there were 600 belonged to the best families. The number of servants who perished is incalculable.

Doña Jacinta Sierra heard her relatives and dropped it off, enabling her to get through the crowd, and gave her shawl to another lady who was saved by stripping herself entirely naked.

During the fire the priest ESZAGUIRRE presided up in the door of the church and gave absolution to the desperate people inside who were roasting in the flames.

No Truth in the Report that Stuart was at Lexington.

BALTIMORE, Sunday, Jan. 17.

The report that STUART was near Lexington on a raid is unfounded.

Dispatches from Gen. KELLEY state that Maj. Gray, of the Maryland cavalry, has returned to his headquarters from a scout to Lexington, and the report that Gen. STUART was there with a large cavalry force for the purpose of an attack on Point of Rocks, or on any other place in the possession of the Government, is entirely unfounded. Not an armed rebel was seen or heard of within forty miles of Lexington.

The Thirty-second Massachusetts Regiment at Home.

BOSTON, Sunday, Jan. 17.

The arrival to-day of the Thirty-second Massachusetts regiment was the occasion of a great ovation to the brave men composing it. The regiment was received at the depot by a crowd of citizens, and under escort of the Independent Cadets and other military bodies, was escorted to the State House, where Gov. ANDREW extended a welcome in an eloquent speech. A salute was fired on the Common. A dinner in Faneuil Hall followed. So enthusiastic and enthusiastic a demonstration on the part of the people has seldom been seen here.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Abstract of Cases Argued for the Week ending January 9.

We continue our statements of the cases argued before the Supreme Court of the United States now sitting at Washington to the close of the week, ending January 9, as follows:

Nos. 95 and 96.—James W. Bolton, Plaintiff in Error, vs. Oscar C. Hale, Defendant in Error.—This is a writ of error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts, in which Court Hale brought an action of assumpsit upon a promissory note, made by Bolton at Boston, where he resided, in favor of the defendant in error, who, at the time being and since has been a citizen of the State of Vermont. The note was made payable at Boston. After the making of the note, and before the suit was brought, the plaintiff in error, pursuant to the laws of Massachusetts relating prior to the making of the note, obtained a certificate of discharge from his debts, embracing, by its terms, all contracts made or to be performed within that State under the passage of those laws. The defendant in error took no part in the proceedings of the plaintiff in error to obtain such discharge. The plaintiff in error, who was the defendant below, pleaded the discharge so obtained in bar of the action upon the note. The Court below held that it could not avail as a defence to the action, and gave judgment for the plaintiff, and the defendant sued out a writ of error to the Supreme Court, and gave the usual security for error.

In behalf of the plaintiff in error it was argued that the several States of the Union possess all the legislative power of sovereign and independent States, except so far as that power is limited by the Constitution of the United States; that in matters of contract the only limitation on the States is that which prohibits laws impairing the obligation of contracts, and that long since decided that State insolvent laws, not operating retrospectively (such being the character of those under which the discharge here in question was granted) do not fall within this constitutional prohibition. The law of Massachusetts in this case has possession of the validity and force which each State of Massachusetts with an uncontrolled power of legislation on the subject, and in the absence of any constitutional restriction, could impart to it. It is not contended that this insolvent law, or any other State law relating to property and contracts, is extraterritorial force; the legislative sovereignty of each State being confined to its own limits, and the law of each State in such case furnishes the only rule for avoiding conflict, at least in regard to contracts. To sustain the position that when the place both of origin and execution of the contract in the same, the contract is to be governed wholly by the law of that place, reference is made to the decisions in the cases of Cox vs. The United States, 6 Peters' Reports, p. 172; Strother vs. Lucas, 12 Peters' Reports, p. 410; Amerowe vs. Bond, 12 Peters' Reports, p. 77; and Bell vs. Bruen, 1 Howard's Reports, 169.

Passages in Story's Conflict of Laws and cases decided in Pick's and Gallison's Reports are relied upon to maintain that contracts discharged by the law of the place which governed it is discharged everywhere. Upon precisely the same state of facts as is presented in this case, the Supreme Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in a recent case, held such discharge a good defence in a suit brought by a non-resident creditor—Scribner vs. Fisher, 2 Gray's Reports, p. 48. In the case of Ogden vs. Saunders, 12 Wheaton's Reports, p. 213, the Supreme Court of the United States decided that the insolvent laws of the State of the origin of the contract are not competent to discharge those contracts when entered into by one of the citizens with a citizen of another State or a foreign country; where no place of performance is fixed by the parties that by the origin of the contract. It is contended that that decision does not apply to the present case, because it was founded solely upon international law, and in the present case the place where was fixed for the performance of the contract and the law of that place must apply to it.

For the defendant in error it is insisted that the appointment of the place of payment of a note is made for the convenience of the debtor, and if he has his money at the place appointed and at the time fixed for payment, he is saved from damages and costs, but if not, his debt becomes a general obligation payable everywhere. It is also urged that the question where a note is payable makes no difference, if the contract here having been between citizens of two different States, the insolvent law of Massachusetts cannot discharge it. A citizen of Vermont, by making his note payable in Massachusetts, does not thereby subject himself to the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts law.

No. 89.—William M. Jones, Appellant vs. Charles W. Green and others, Appellees.—This is an appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Nebraska. Two judgments were recovered in the District Court of Nebraska Territory in favor of the appellees against one Frank W. Brown, and they filed a bill in equity against Jones, setting forth that the judgments had been recovered, that execution had been duly issued thereon, and that no property of Brown could be found, and that Brown had purchased property in the city of Omaha of one John McConnie, and being insolvent took the title in the name of Jones, and praying that it might be sold to satisfy the judgments. Jones answered the bill denying that executions had been duly issued upon the judgments and saying that he was undecided whether Brown was insolvent and unable to pay his debts at the time of the purchase of the property in question, and alleging that he (Jones) purchased the property for himself, and had partly paid for it with his own money. Proofs were taken and a decree finally entered in favor of the plaintiffs below, and the defendant took an appeal on the ground that his answer to the bill having been under oath, it was not overcome by evidence which was inclusive, and must therefore be held to be conclusive.

No. 90.—Samuel Woods, Plaintiff in Error, vs. Ralph Wilson, Defendant in Error.—This is a writ of error to the Circuit Court of the United States, for the Northern District of Illinois, in which court Wilson had brought an action for the recovery of a tract of land in Illinois. The defendant below claimed title under a tax sale, the deed under which was executed by the county clerk, because the judgment on which the sale was made was irregularly obtained. That ruling of the court below is now assigned as error, as is also the admission of certain documents offered by the plaintiff below on the ground that proper notice had not been given of the taking of them, and that they were not taken according to the requirements of the law.

No. 91.—Vose Burr, Plaintiff in Error, vs. Elias Phelps and others, Defendants in Error.—An action of ejectment was brought in the court below on certain lots in Chicago, and judgment was given for the defendants, in error, the plaintiff below, for $2,279.28 and costs, with a stipulation between the parties for a stay of execution. A few days afterward the defendants below sued out the writ, filing a supersedeas bond. The defendants in error now move to dismiss the writ of error on the ground that it was improvidently issued for delay merely.

No. 92.—Hiram Hecker, Plaintiff in Error, vs. Charles Fowler, John Fowler, Defendants in Error.—This is a suit in error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New-York. A action was brought in that Court by Fowler to recover damages for an alleged breach of a contract providing for the payment by the plaintiff in error of certain sum for the use of a patent. While the case was pending, the attorney of the parties agreed to refer it to a referee to hear and determine all the issues involved, with the same powers as the court, with an agreement that the report of the referee should have same force and effect as a judgment of the court. The referee found that $9,000 were due to the Heckers, whereupon the attorney of the defendant in error drew up the form of a judgment, and without the presence or action of the court, except the order of reference, filed it as a judgment of the court. This proceeding is said by the plaintiff in error to be unusual and to rest entirely upon the practice of the State Courts of New-York, under the code of state state, which clothes a referee with the attributes of a judge. The referee, it is argued, did not decide the case in conformity with the order of reference, because he did not determine all the issues in the case, and the proceeding is said to be irregular. In reply, it is contended that the referee was not required to report all the facts, but merely to determine them, that he did actually determine them, and that the parties having agreed to refer, are bound by the judgment of the referee which was entered as judgment of the court.

No. 93.—George Miller & Wife, Appellants, vs. John L. Talbott, Appellee.—This is an appeal from Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Indiana. In that Court a bill in equity was filed, alleging that on February, 1856, R. R. Farmer, representing himself to be the agent of George Miller of Fort Wayne, Indiana, applied to Cornelius Palmer, at the City of New-York for the purchase of a certain bill of dry goods for Miller, for five years, to be secured by a mortgage upon certain real estate in Allen County, Indiana. This was declined, as Palmer says, according to the customary usage in the dealings in New-York, but after negotiation, Miller of Fort Wayne, executed his promissory note, payable at Palmer's, Feb. 28, 1856, promising to pay five hundred dollars, with interest, to the order of Palmer and Frederick Wallace, assignees, or to their order, payable at the city of New-York, with ten per cent. per annum, payable yearly, and if not paid six months from date, and the interest be past due and unpaid, then the whole of the note to become due and payable, and the note, principal and interest was made payable at the Commercial Bank, Cleveland, Ohio, with the current rate of exchange on New-York, and without relief from the valuation or appraisement laws of the state of Indiana. To secure the payment of the note, George Miller and his wife executed, same day executed to Edward S. Wallace a mortgage upon real estate in Allen County, Ind. The note and mortgage were taken by Palmer on New-York by Miller, and on or about the 12th of February, 1856, Wallace sold and assigned the note and mortgage to Hiram S. Talbott, for a valuable consideration, and delivered them to him. $1,000 became due Feb. 28, 1856, but Miller failed to pay, and thereupon Talbott filed a bill in Allen Circuit Court, in which debt was due, and praying for a foreclosure of the mortgage.

The court below sustained the bill and the responsent took this appeal. The defence is, that the promissory note and mortgage were usurious and void according to the laws of New-York, at the time the contract was made. The principal question is whether the contract made in Indiana, or the place of payment of the note, was in New-York, the place of the contract, which allege that the contract, having been made in New-York, the law of that State must govern, which makes the transaction usurious and void. The other side contends that the note, having been made payable at Cleveland, Ohio, the law of that State must govern, that being the place of the execution of the contract, which allows a recovery of legal interest in such cases.

No. 94.—Lee & Leavitt, Plaintiffs in Error, vs. Patrick Watson, James A. Watson and Washington Watson, Defendants in Error.—This is a writ of error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky, in which Court an action of assumpsit was brought against the defendants as indorsers of a promissory note. On the trial the plaintiffs produced a promissory note, dated at Cincinnati, by J. M. & W. J. Watson, payable to the order of the defendants at the Branch Bank of Kentucky, at Frankfort, and by the defendants indorsed to Lee & Leavitt. The defendants objected to the admission of the note, on the ground that it was not sufficient evidence to support the action. The Court sustained the objection, and instructed the jury to find for the defendants. The note, though filled up in Cincinnati, and indorsed by the indorsers there, was given to the agent of the plaintiffs, then in Kentucky, to be conveyed by him to the plaintiffs in Ohio, to whom he brought and delivered the note, and the defendants claimed that the note was therefore subject to the effect of Kentucky, and that by the law of Kentucky the note not having been discounted by a bank, but being still owned by the original parties, was a mere assignable chose in action, and not commercial paper, and that the original obligors or makers must be prosecuted to insolvency by the plaintiffs, the assignees, before the defendants, the assignors, could be sued, as the Court below held. The plaintiffs in error claim that in contemplation of law the indorsement was made in Ohio; that this indorsement was a new contract entered into by the indorsers in Kentucky and the indorsees in Ohio, governed by the rules of commercial paper, and that according to those rules the plaintiffs should recover without regard to the rights of the original parties.

No. 95.—Richard Gregg, Plaintiff in Error, vs. Henry Von Paul, Defendant in Error.—Von Paul brought an action of ejectment against Gregg in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Illinois, to recover possession of certain premises in Peoria, and obtained a verdict and judgment. The question involved is whether where parties have executed an agreement for the sale of land by which one is to execute a deed on the payment of a certain sum of money within a given time, the tender of a deed after the time fixed is sufficient.

No. 96.—Albertus C. Spain, Appellant, vs. James Hamilton, W. S. Wetmore, W. W. Corcoran and others, Appellees.—The appellant filed a bill, May 31, 1856, against James Hamilton, W. S. Wetmore, Charles Mandeville, Justus Rendall, Christopher Fallon, Wm. B. Reed, Samuel Jordan, James A. Bayard, (the last six being trustees of the Bank of the United States), T. S. Holford, G. S. Holford, G. D. Lamar, R. P. Cuyler, and Corcoran & Riggs. The object of the suit was to settle priorities to a large sum of money in the Treasury of the United States, arising from the supposed interest of General James Hamilton, in one-tenth part of the portion of the proceeds awarded to the United States Bank as an original creditor of the State of Texas under the act of Congress of 1850, commonly known as the Texas Indemnity Act. Spain, as committee of a lunatic who was assignee of Hamilton, also claimed the proceeds of a bond numbered 1,164, filed by the Holfords, which included among other amounts the amount of $1 Texas bond, originally the property of General Hamilton, and assigned by him to James Holford as collateral to a certain indebtedness, and also claimed that the bond 1,164 included 50 other Texas bonds, the proportionate amount of which it was alleged the Holfords claimed for the benefit of Lamar. The claims of the Holfords and Lamar were afterward compromised to by the complainant, and were, in fact, fully paid, pendente lite. The case, as determined below, rested alone upon the question of priorities between the assignees of Hamilton's interest in the Bank of the United States claim, with which neither the Holfords nor Lamar had any concern. The trustees of the bank withdrew all claim to the fund of $73,505.12 left in the Treasury as part of the proceeds of the bank claim.

Pierce Butler was also made a defendant, and the administrators of P. W. R. Hill, and they, with W. S. Wetmore and Corcoran & Riggs are now the only defendants, each of them claiming to be the assignee of Hamilton, entitled to priority over the complainant.

No. 97.—William H. D. C. Wright, Appellant, vs. James Ellison, Executor, Joseph Baker and others, Appellees.—This is an appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia. A bill was filed in that Court to recover a portion of certain moneys awarded to the appellees by the commissioners under the treaty between the United States and Brazil, in satisfaction of a claim by the capture by the Brazilian government, in 1827, of a vessel called the Cayetan and her cargo, for an alleged attempt to run the blockade, which that government pretended to be maintaining against Buenos Ayres.

Mr. Wright was a citizen of Baltimore, residing and doing business as a merchant at Rio de Janeiro. He was appointed by the agents of the vessel their agent to prosecute the claim for the vessel, and was to receive a compensation of 25 per cent. of the amount recovered. He devoted great energy to the prosecution of the claim against the Government of Brazil, and it is alleged that the Government of the United States would have abandoned it but for his representations. The matter was brought before the Prize Courts in Brazil who condemned the vessel. He had returned to this country when the commission, established under the convention of 1849, met at Washington. He appeared by counsel before the commission and filed the proofs, acting under his old power of attorney. Other parties, however, procured a power of attorney from Ellison, executor of one of the owners of the vessel, to appear before the commission, and the commission awarded the claim to the claimants, but refused to allow any portion of it to Wright. He contended that he had a specific lien on the fund to the extent of 25 per cent. The defendants contend that his power of attorney is simply to prosecute the case in the Prize Courts, in which he failed, and that a convention having been made between the two Governments in reference to various claims, the case had to be presented de novo, according to the rules of the commission, which was done by Ellison's attorney. The Court below dismissed the bill, and hence this appeal.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

A Baltimore dispatch says that word has been received from Gen. KELLY, announcing the return of Major Cole, of the Maryland cavalry, from a scout to Leesburgh. The Major saw nothing of the rebels, and he does not credit the report that Stuart is threatening Point of Rocks. Not an armed rebel was seen within forty miles of Leesburgh.

Richmond papers of the 15th inst. were received Saturday, at Fortress Monroe. They contain telegrams from Charleston as late as Thursday last, when the bombardment was progressing with increased fury, several new Parrotts having been opened upon the city from Fort Gregg. During the two days preceding the date of the dispatch, 471 shells had been fired at the place, but with what effect is not mentioned. The telegrams report the number of vessels at Hilton Head to be very large, and say that a fleet has recently gone Southward. MOSBY is reported to have been badly whipped in the recent affair at Harper's Ferry, but notwithstanding his losses, he is said to be still harassing our men.

Gen. SEDGWICK has written a letter to Gen. FRENCH, commanding the Third corps, emphatically denying the serious accusation against the latter by a New-England clergyman, from which it appears that no such conversation as is represented with Gen. MEADE ever took place. Gen. SEDGWICK pays a high compliment to Gen. FRENCH's personal bearing during action, as well as his able disposition of troops.

Our Washington dispatches inform us that a Court-martial has been organized, to meet on the 19th inst., with Maj. Gen. ORDEAY as President, for the trial of Surgeon-General HAMMOND and others, against whom charges have been preferred.

Admiral LEE has officially reported the destruction of the new first-class rebel steamer Dare. This was the vessel's first trip, and on the 7th inst., finding it impossible to escape falling a prize to our blockaders off Wilmington, her captain ran her ashore, when she bilged, becoming a total wreck. The Dare is the twentieth steamer destroyed or captured off Wilmington since July last.

The United States steamship Vanderbilt, Capt. Baldwin, arrived at Sandy Hook late last night, from her long and unsuccessful cruise in search of the pirate Alabama.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate on Saturday a petition was presented by Mr. MORGAN, from citizens of New-York, remonstrating against the relief of unnaturalized citizens from the draft. The consideration of the Enrollment bill was entered upon and gave rise to a discussion, in which several Senators participated, and, in the course of the debate, the question of employing negro troops was incidentally brought up. Mr. GRIMES did not desire that colored men should form any part of the quota of a State, but that they should be raised under the protection of the State Government. Offering this idea as an amendment to the Enrollment bill, it was defeated. Amendments were adopted to the effect that veteran troops reenlisting shall be credited to the quota of the district in which they originally enlisted, and to provide that commutation money paid by persons drafted shall be applied to procure substitutes in the district where the draft took place. Mr. TAULBULL offered an amendment requesting the President to call out 100,000 men for 100 days, with the sole object of driving the rebels out of Virginia and freeing prisoners at and around Richmond, but the amendment, after debate, was rejected.

GENERAL NEWS.

The steamship Ariel from Aspinwall, Jan. 6, arrived at this port early yesterday morning, bringing $500,000 in specie. Among her news is the account of a horrible conflagration at Santiago, Chili. On the 8th ultimo, it being the last day of the celebration of the feast of Immaculate Conception, the Church of the Company of Jesus was filled to overflowing, mainly by women and children, to witness the magnificent illumination of the edifice and to participate in the closing exercises. The church was heavily hung with drapery and lighted with 20,000 lamps. Not less 2,000 persons were present, including among them the elite of the capital. Suddenly a gas-pipe burst, and such was the inflammable character of the decorations that almost instantly the entire building was in flames. The poor creatures inside, some, it is possible, through insufficient means of egress, to escape the fate of burning alive, and in less than fifteen minutes 2,000 of them miserably perished. The conduct of the priests on this occasion excited great wishes against them. Nothing new is developed in regard to the war between New-Granada and Ecuador. The Ecuadorian Government has proposed terms of peace to Mosquera, which he will probably accept, if the expenses he has incurred ($600,000) are reimbursed.

At a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce held on Saturday afternoon, Mr. G. W. BLUNT read the following letter received from the First Assistant Secretary of the Navy:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, Jan. 12, 1864.

George W. Blunt, Esq., New-York:

MY DEAR SIR: The charges against the Navy Department for building slow steamers is best answered by a comparative public trial, and I am authorized by the Secretary to make arrangements to run one of our vessels against the fastest sea-going side-wheel steamer in the country, foreign or American. The Adriatic, Illinois, Baltic, Bavaria and one of the Cunard fleet are, I believe, in New-York at this time. The Sutlej, one of the only class of side-wheel steamers constructed by this Department, and known as double-end, is now at the Washington Navy-yard, and will be sent around to New-York if a race can be arranged. Her tonnage is nine hundred and seventy-four, and her draft eight feet six inches; she will run against the same tonnage and draft in any weather. If her competitor is much larger, the race of course takes place in smooth water.

Very respectfully, G. V. FOX.

Only twenty-eight non-commissioned officers and privates have deserted from the regular army to the rebels since the war began. The number of officers who resigned, mostly to join the rebel army, is 277.

There was increased buoyancy in the Stock Market on Saturday, and a rise of 2@3 per cent. in Gold. No change in the Money Market.

Hon. Geo. W. JULIAN, of Indiana, who was the Free-soil candidate for the Vice-Presidency in 1852, was married on the 31st ultimo, to Miss LAURA GROSVENOR, youngest daughter of Hon. JOSHUA R. GIDDINGS. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. CONKLIN, of Ashtabula.

Taxation in America—Its Principles and Practice.

We published a letter yesterday on "The Principles of Taxation," recommending the Government to lay the burden as far as possible on "primary manufactures," or, in other words, on those manufactured articles, such as pig-iron, which furnish the raw material for other manufactures, because these taxes are easier of collection, but are less harassing and vexatious to the community at large. Now that Congress is turning its attention to the necessity, which every one sees, of raising more money by taxes and less by loans, we hope this advice will have due weight. Nothing can be plainer than that the proportion, which at present exists between these two modes of raising revenue, cannot be preserved any longer. We must pay more of our current expenses, out of our means, and less of them by borrowing, if we mean to preserve our credit. If we go on raising loans at the same rate as during the last two years, during two years more, we shall certainly bring on a crisis such as nobody would like to contemplate, and no dexterity in the management of our finances would be of the slightest use in warding it off. Every scheme that does not involve a large amount of taxation, is simply either a postponement of payment, or the conversion of one evidence of indebtedness into another evidence of indebtedness. The debt is not reduced by it in the least, or the payment of either interest or principal made one particle easier. And although it seems most probable that the war will be over within the present year, we have no right to calculate on this, either in arranging our financial or our military affairs. As long as the war is actually going on, all calculations as to the time when it will end, or the way in which it will end, are too vague and too uncertain to furnish any sound basis for a plan of finance. The only plan consistent with safety or honor, is to tax and raise men as if the struggle was to last for two or three years longer, and as if the termination of actual hostilities was sure not to bring with it complete pacification. Nearly all our mistakes and misfortunes, hitherto, have been due to our unfortunate faith in the shortness of the contest. The waste, both of blood and treasure, which has been caused by our confident expectation that the rebellion would be over in three or six months, cannot, of course, be accurately known; but we know enough to know that it has been enormous. It is high time to abandon these delusions, and to acknowledge frankly and fairly the magnitude of our task, and prepare for it. We have to conquer half a continent, and, when conquered, we shall be obliged, according to all present appearances, to reorganize its social system from the base to the apex. This is a tremendous work, but it is a glorious one, and will call for the display of as much wisdom as valor. We have shown the valor—but the demand for wisdom will, of course, last long after that for valor has ceased.

Congress seems to be thoroughly alive to the considerations, and thoroughly anxious to place the national credit upon some firmer and more permanent basis than that of loans. We are accordingly to have heavier taxes and more of them. Of the increased weight we are very glad, but against the increased number we protest as a step in the wrong direction. The policy of levying a great number of taxes has been abandoned in England, the country in which taxation has been most thoroughly reduced to an art—both because of its vexatiousness and comparative unproductiveness; and all the reasons which fell against it in England fell against it still more powerfully in America. Our population is not only inferior to that of Great Britain, but scattered over a five or six fold greater space. And it is entirely unused to the pursuits of the tax-gatherer, while to Englishmen he has been a constant visitant for a thousand years. Moreover, with our system of government, it is a consideration of prime importance that the number of Government functionaries should be kept as small as possible. A vast and complicated system of raising revenue, overspreading the country like a minute network, would not only affect the popular vote prejudicially, but would, if the places of officials were permanent, speedily lay the foundation for a bureaucracy like that of France or Austria, that would eat out the vitals of the country and destroy free institutions. With "rotation in office," and a change of employes every four years, it is hardly necessary to say that it would cause an amount of confusion at every change of Administration, and an amount of corruption and undue influence at every Presidential election, under which the Government in its present shape could certainly not long survive.

There are certain great principles to be kept in mind, in framing a system of taxation; and if they are kept in mind in framing ours, we venture to say our powers of raising money will yet astonish mankind. They are: first, to tax luxuries rather than necessities; secondly, to levy no tax on the means of preserving health, or of acquiring education; thirdly, to avoid all taxes, as far as possible, which require a large force for their collection, or necessitate applications to a great number of persons; fourthly, that as all taxes are ultimately paid by the consumer, you reach him as fully and effectually by levying the tax on articles before they reach him as when they are actually passing into his hands, and with far less vexation to him. It is therefore better to tax iron at the mines, than when it is converted into spades; better to tax paper at the mills than to tax it in the stationer's shop; better to tax whisky at the distillery than in the public house; better to tax cotton at the manufactory than hunt down every huckster and peddler, to make him buy a license. By keeping all this in mind, the work can be done with about a fourth of the force, and a twentieth part of the trouble, that would be otherwise necessary; for every dealer in the country is compelled, for the protection of his own interests, and yet almost unconsciously, to act as a collector of Government dues, and his customers pay them, without knowing that he has demanded them.

Our City Police at Albany.

We trust the Legislature will give early attention to the subject of our Police. Gov. SEYMOUR's extraordinary action in removing the entire Commission and appointing new men in their places, regardless of what are believed to be the explicit and peremptory requirements of the law, is certain to involve us in great difficulty, and to impair most seriously the efficiency of the force. Public sentiment would not allow the present Commissioners, even if they were disposed, to quietly yield to action believed to be utterly illegal, and known to be highly detrimental to the peace and good order of the City. The validity of Gov. SEYMOUR's action will be tested in all the Courts of law, and meantime the Police force will be demoralized, the City saddled with heavy expenses, men kept out of their pay, and a conflict of authority created, injurious to every interest of the community.

The Legislature can prevent this, and provide against its recurrence. Let it create a new Commission, embracing all the good features of the present system, and placing it on a basis which will exclude mere party control hereafter. The Commission should be equally divided between the two political parties, so as to secure an independent administration of its authority. The bill already before the Legislature provides for this in a manner which, so far as we are aware, meets the approval of the whole community. Four men, two of each party, are appointed Commissioners, with reasonably long terms of office, only one going out at a time; and new appointments, when necessary, are made by the joint action of the two branches of the Legislature.

As to the men selected, no difficulty or delay ought to be experienced on that point. Each party, acting through its most reliable and responsible organs, ought to designate its own members of the Board. So far as the Union party is concerned, we believe there is absolutely no difference of opinion on the subject. Messrs. ACTON and BENDIN, the present incumbents, have performed their duties with so much ability, energy, independence and effectiveness as to have commanded the entire confidence of their political friends, and, indeed, of the great body of the people, without regard to party distinctions. We have never heard any suggestion from any quarter, of a desire that they should be replaced by any other names. The selection of the Democratic members must necessarily be left to the Democratic party. It is their right to make it, if their support is expected, and it is only just that the responsibility of the selection should rest with them. They would commit a great blunder, as well as do a great wrong, if they were to forget that the public expects that none but men of personal integrity and independence of character will find places on this Commission.

We suggest to the Legislature the wisdom and necessity of prompt action on the subject. The interests involved are too numerous and too important to render any unnecessary delay either just or expedient.

CONGRESSIONAL REPORTS.—We see it stated that the United States Senate is inquiring into the propriety of employing an official reporter to furnish reports of the debates for the press in New-York and elsewhere. They complain that the reports now published are meagre and unsatisfactory. While Senators are prosecuting this inquiry we may give them a hint or two that will be of service. The reason why our Congressional reports are so brief is that the public do not want them any longer. We have tried the experiment. Three years ago the TIMES, in connection with two of its neighbors, had special reports of both Houses of Congress made and transmitted by telegraph expressly for their columns. They were much more full than those furnished for the Associated Press. The increased expense thus incurred by the New-York papers that entered into it was not far from a thousand dollars a week; yet nobody seemed to care for the increased fullness of the reports. Indeed, the disposition on the part of the public was rather the other way; the reports were too long to be generally read, and it was on this account that they were discontinued.

The fact is, a very small portion of the people are interested in the detailed debates of Congress. It is very seldom that any member makes a speech which everybody wishes to read. If the public wanted these debates reported in full, they would be sure to have them, for it is the interest of a newspaper to furnish what its readers desire—and whatever else they may neglect, publishers are no more likely to neglect their own interests than any other business men. The only way in which Congress can secure a full report of its debates at all is by paying for it. The degree of interest felt in them by the public would not accomplish it. If it is proposed to furnish extended reports to the New-York press and pay for their publication, we shall, of course, have no objection; but the press itself will be quite certain to procure for itself such reports as the great mass of the public require. Editors are much better judges of that than Senators.

CORBIN AND DELANE—NEWSPAPER IMPERSONALITY.—One of our exchanges mentions a "report" that "since the editor of the London Times, Mr. DELANE, allowed himself to be smoked out from his snug seclusion of impersonality, and castigated by Mr. CORBIN, that unhappy gentleman is treated with marked coldness by his acquaintances and whilom friends in ministerial circles." This is only one of the many absurdities to which this famous controversy has given rise. The idea that any revelation of the editorship of the Times has taken place in consequence of the correspondence between Mr. CORBIN and Mr. DELANE is simply ridiculous. We presume there has not been, for the last ten years, the slightest doubt in the mind of any reasonably well informed politician in England, that Mr. DELANE was the editor of the Times. He certainly has never taken the slightest pains to conceal it. Every member of Parliament knew it, and was very glad to meet him in that capacity. It was just as well known in all the clubs, and in all other places of resort for men at all interested in public affairs, as was the fact that PALMERSTON was Premier, and CORBIN the head of the Reform party. When he visited this country Mr. DELANE was received everywhere, publicly and privately, as the editor of the Times, and never thought of denying, evading or concealing the fact.

The truth is, the impersonality of the Times is precisely that which belongs to every newspaper, English and American, the editorials of which are written by several persons. The editor is known to everybody who takes the trouble to inquire; but the writer of any particular article is not known—either in the London Times, or in the New-York Tribune, Herald, Commercial Advertiser, or any other leading journal. Indeed, we presume that twenty men in England have known who edited the Times, where one could tell who edited the Daily News, Sun, Star, Telegraph, or any other London newspaper. It is only in France, where every writer on a newspaper is required to sign his name to every article he writes, that the principle of personality in journalism is thoroughly carried out. It has its advantages, doubtless—but it does not increase the importance and influence of journalism. Indeed, if it did, LOUIS NAPOLEON would never have imposed it upon the French Press.

Mr. CORBIN gained one very important point by forcing upon Mr. DELANE a personal controversy: he commanded universal public attention, and thus secured for the disclaimer he made of certain doctrines imputed to him, a degree of publicity which he could not have got otherwise. He might have written scores of corrections and explanations to the Times, and that paper might have printed them; and they would have been forgotten as soon as read. But by fastening a personal quarrel on so prominent and influential a gentleman as Mr. DELANE, he attached to the subject a degree of interest it could not otherwise have commanded. This was a very important point, but beyond this we do not see any such astounding results from the controversy as others profess to find in it.

AN IMPORTANT LEGAL DECISION.—The General Term of the Court of Common Pleas, after some four and a half years' delay, has just decided the vexed question as to the import of the section in the Metropolitan Police Act which forbids the "publicly keeping" of intoxicating liquors on Sundays and election days. The judgment of the court below is affirmed, and it is settled that "the keeping of liquors in a public manner so as to invite the public to purchase, or keeping a store or bar-room containing them open and easily accessible to the public," is a violation of the law.

This case of the People vs. Halpin, is the more important, that several thousand similar cases were stipulated by counsel and ordered by the court, in 1859, to "abide the ultimate determination" of this suit. We hope there will be no failure in collecting the penalties in every case; the public good requires it, and the Police Life Insurance Fund will gain a handsome accession from the aggregate of fines.

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.—We give this morning a tale of horrors that has not been equaled for many a day, in the facts of the burning to death of between two and three thousand people in a church at Santiago, the Capital of Chili, South America. The vivid pictures given by our correspondents on the spot, are certainly heart-rending. The horrors of war—its carnage and its cruelties are bad enough; but a scene such as this, is infinitely more shocking than the fiercest contests of brave men. The victims were of all grades of society, embracing among them the élite of the gay capital of Chili. We have a list of over 2,000 of these victims, sent us by our special correspondents, which we have no room to publish, but those interested can see the list for a few days at the counting-room of the TIMES.

A Card.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In the issue of your paper of the 14th inst., we find an article stating that "Rev. Mr. HALL, a member of the Christian Commission", had caused reports derogatory to Gen. FRENCH to be circulated in such a way as to convey the impression that they were originated by Gen. MEADE. On an examination of our records, we find that no such person was ever in the employ of the Christian Commission. Moreover, the rules laid down for the instruction of a delegate in the employment of the Commission expressly state that "he is strictly enjoined to observe all army and navy regulations, and abstain from casting reflections upon the authorities—military, medical, and clerical." In justice to the Christian Commission, we hope you will publish this statement.

THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

The Spring Campaign—Necessity of Advancing upon Richmond by a Double Line.

From Our Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Jan. 16, 1864.

There is every likelihood that when the Spring campaign opens in Virginia, it will be under military conditions essentially different from those that have attended either of the former Spring campaigns in that theatre of war. The military map of Virginia is now thoroughly understood. The experience of six campaigns has shown that any single line of manœuvre that can be taken up with Richmond as the objective point must be indecisive. It is utterly impracticable, from the nature of the enemy's lines of retreat, to move by a single line on his communications, without so exposing our own communications and thereby so uncovering Washington as to make it easy for the enemy to compel a retrograde movement on our part by a simple corresponding movement on our flank. To bring on a decisive engagement and take Richmond, it is indispensable that there be a double advance on the enemy—on his front and on his rear; or, in definite terms, a movement in the direct line, and a cooperative movement by the line of the Peninsula or the south side of the James. If each column be of sufficient strength to take care of itself, the whole weight of the military objection to a division of force is removed; and, it is fair to add, that with correct and energetic action in accordance with this plan, Richmond may be taken and the enemy driven out of Virginia.

Such a combined, cooperative movement by the double lines indicated will mark the opening of the Spring campaign. And in making this statement, I am revealing no secret of the military authorities here. I merely make an inference, first from known facts, and secondly from the military necessity, and both are quite as accessible to Gen. LEE as they are to any individual spectator here. And first of the latter. A movement by what is called the overland, or direct route to Richmond, is even less promising of success against the coming campaign than it has at any of the previously attempted advances by that line. For, in addition to the already mentioned strategic difficulties attending a decisive movement, and the great tactical advantages possessed by the enemy in the peculiar adaptations of the military geography of Virginia to defensive operations, the resources of art have doubled the obstacles which would have to be encountered. "The natural positions which are generally met with cannot," says NAPOLEON, "protect an army from the attacks of a superior force without the aid of art." The rebels have taken due note of this, and acted accordingly. The line of the Rapidan, which would have to be forced in any forward movement, has been rendered almost impregnable by the rebels. Its whole length, in fact, presents the character of one great, extended "curtain," or parapet, formed by the commanding ground on the south bank of the river, occupied by the enemy. This they have further strengthened by field-works for artillery, like so many bastions in a fortification, and by rifle-pits for infantry. And, to complete the analogy, the river in front of this line subserves perfectly the purposes of a wet ditch.

Perhaps the closest modern parallel to this defensive position, which the rebels have taken up, is presented by the famous lines of Torres Vedras, constructed by WELLINGTON to cover Lisbon, in the same manner as the fortified line of the Rapidan is designed to cover Richmond. They consisted of two lines of detached works, extending from the Tagus on the right to the sea on the left. The inner line, which was the strongest, extended 24 miles from Alhandra on the Tagus, about 15 miles from Lisbon, to the mouth of the San Lorenzo River, 25 miles from Lisbon. The outer line extended likewise from the sea to the Tagus, passing near the village of Torres Vedras, and covered nearly 30 miles. These lines enabled WELLINGTON perfectly to resist all the efforts of the greatly superior numbers of the French. The defensive line of the rebels on the Rapidan in the [illegible] to the left on the [illegible] the South West Mountains [illegible] Rappahannock, and in its extent, as well as in its general character, it strangely enough conforms almost exactly to that of Torres Vedras. In speaking of this position of the rebels as a line, we do not mean to intimate that it is continuously fortified, for the art of defence embraces "broken lines" as well as "continuous lines." Thus in the case of Torres Vedras, parts of the line toward the centre were upwards of eight miles asunder. What is meant is, that the line presents a chain of positions capable of mutually supporting each other; and the rebel defensive line of the Rapidan has perfectly this character. Simply to name a few other defensive lines that have served a similar purpose to the lines of Torres Vedras, I may mention those of Arras, of Lentecoy, of Lille and of Mantua.

Now the point of moment is that any attempt for a direct movement on Richmond would encounter this new and formidable obstacle. I call it "new," because the construction of this defensive line dates from the last premeditated advance toward the rebel capital by the Army of the Potomac, under HOOKER, in April last. Commenced after the return of the rebel army from the invasive movement north of the Potomac, the work was pushed energetically forward during the Summer and Fall, till the whole line of the Rapidan was powerfully fortified; and we may be very certain that if there remained any additional touches needed, the rebels will not fail to add them during the period of repose both armies are now enjoying. This existing fact, therefore, enters as a new element into the problem of an advance Richmond-wards, and it is an element which cannot safely be omitted in any speculations on that problem. It is a fresh obstacle superadded to those that have heretofore barred the various advances toward the rebel capital, all of which have been unsuccessful. It is true there are not wanting examples in military history of the forcing of similar defensive lines, among which may be mentioned MARLBOROUGH'S passage of the lines of the Mehaigne (1706,) which had occupied three years in the construction, and the passage of the lines of Bouchain in 1711, by the same commander—both illustrations of matchless strategy. But such attempts must always, save in exceptionally fortunate circumstances, be attended with enormous loss of life to the assailing party. There is little doubt that behind his present powerfully fortified position, Gen. LEE will await with entire confidence the Spring advance of the Army of the Potomac, if that advance is to be again confined to the line of the overland route.

This reasoning proceeds on the supposition that LEE will continue to hold this line for the defence of Richmond, instead of evacuating Richmond and Virginia, as has been conjectured. There is not the slightest probability that the latter course will be pursued, and the statements in corroboration of it, such as that the arsenals, workshops, etc., of Richmond were being removed from that point, are wholly destitute of foundation in fact. Every possible consideration urges the rebels to defend their Capital to the last; and there is little doubt that when the time comes for Gen. MEADE to advance, he will find a strong hostile front before him.

These facts, certainly, do not present a very encouraging view of the military prospect in Virginia, and did they stand alone, there would be little to warrant the anticipation of greater success in the coming campaign than has attended each of our previous advances in Virginia. But they do not stand alone; and we have now to take into account the transformation on the extension of the two forces that must be brought about by the advance of a cooperative column by the line of the Peninsula or the south side of the James, at the same time that the main column is set in motion by the direct line. The intelligence of the movement of such a body by the line indicated would, beyond a doubt, have the effect of promptly recalling LEE to the defence of the menaced capital, as well as to save his own communications, which would be directly threatened. This retreat, of course, uncovers the defensive line of the Rapidan, which the rebels have constructed with so much labor, and enables the two Union armies, which have been moving on convergent lines, to unite in front of Richmond.

Such a plan of campaign is now being developed for execution the moment the season for active field operations arrives. If we may be permitted to suppose that the "special service" of the fifty thousand men which the gallant HANCOCK is now recruiting his corps up to is the advance by the line of the Peninsula, the country may be assured that the work is committed to a head and hands as able as the service presents. United with the force already under command of Gen. BUTLER, this army would be raised to a strength quite capable of taking care of itself, even without the aid of the cooperative force moving by the overland route. With such a combination we are authorized to indulge the brightest hopes of a completely successful Spring campaign in Virginia. It will give us, for the first time, the combination which every military man has long seen to be indispensable for a decisive movement against Richmond.

In addition to the detachment of HANCOCK's corps, (the Second,) other important measures of reorganization will be taken with the Army of the Potomac. The five corps which now compose it—the First, Second, Third, Fifth and Sixth—will be consolidated into three corps, of which HANCOCK, of the Second, will command one, and SEDGWICK, of the Sixth, another. The remaining corps will be commanded by a General, not of the Army of the Potomac, whose name it would not be judicious now mention. This consolidation of corps will involve a reorganization of the subordinate military members, including the divisions and brigades, down to the battalions, which, being the unit of force, permit no change. The regiments, however, will be recruited, each up to the figure of at least 500 men.

Such a change in the condition of the Army of the Potomac has long been felt as a necessity. That army has for some time been unwieldy and unmanageable, from the very weight of its organization over the material elements of which it is made up. And in addition to the fact of the present form of the army rendering it cumbersome to handle, there is the fact that the sad reduction of the separate organizations of the army to mere skeletons tells badly on the spirit and morale of the men. Many of the regiments now number no more than a hundred and fifty, a hundred, or even seventy-five men—not equal, indeed, to a full company—while the companies make the slim and sad show of ten or a dozen members. Under such conditions men inevitably lose that feeling of coherence, of mutual support, and of the strength of mass, which comes when the organizations of which they form a part are at the full. The changes in progress will add strength to the members, and compactness, manageability and mobility to the whole organism.

And while producing these desirable changes in the interior constitution, the reorganization will have another result, of perhaps even more practical importance. It will throw out the several inefficient, timid, jealous and vacillating corps commanders, that have long been its bane, and hindered that superb army from achieving the results it should long ago have reached. We shall have no more such mortifying spectacles as the "marching off in good order" of a certain corps commander at the time one of his fellow corps commanders became engaged with a superior force of the enemy at Bristoe, two or three months ago; shall be less exposed to such fatal delays as that of the commander of the Third corps, which on the occasion of the last advance baulked and brought to naught the boldest strategic conception of the campaign. I state this, knowing whereof I speak; for although the TIMES very properly defended Gen. FRENCH against the imputations of drunkenness charged against him, he was not the less greatly to blame for his inexcusable delay, and it will be found when Gen. MEADE's report of this last advance comes to be published, that he places the responsibility of the failure to the account of that commander.

Of the present condition of the Army of the Potomac I have from Gen. HUMPHREYS, Chief of Staff to the Commanding General, reports of the most encouraging character. In fact, in spirit, morale, discipline and patriotism that army was never in so fine a condition as now, and contrasted with its hapless state this time last year, it would hardly be recognized as the same army. It looks with entire confidence to a glorious campaign in the Spring, and I am sure the whole country will unite in the expectation that after such untoward fortune in the past, that noble army may be given the recompense of justifying all we know and hope of it, by bringing the war to a close, in the destruction of the foremost army of the rebellion and the capture of its capital.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE N. Y. TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Jan. 17.

THE NEW-YORK CUSTOM-HOUSE FRAUDS.

The House Committee on Expenditures, which has been instructed to investigate the New-York Custom-House frauds, sent subpœnas North on Saturday night, summoning HIRAM BARNEY and others to come to Washington and answer questions. It is said that soon after his arrival here, Mr. BARNEY will be seen by Mr. LINCOLN; also, that ADRIAN WILKESON is intended as Mr. BARNEY's successor in office.

WORKING OF THE AMNESTY PROCLAMATION.

Eleven hundred citizens of Newbern, N. C., have enrolled themselves of the President's Amnesty Proclamation, and taken the oath and given the parole required by it.

POOR REBEL PROSPECTS ABROAD.

Hon. ROBERT J. WALKER, writing to a friend here, says that the revolution in European sentiment, especially in England and France, in favor of the North, is astonishing. Since the victory of GRANT at Chattanooga and the success of BANKS in Texas, the Transatlantic rebels have become thoroughly cowed, and unwillingly admit that the Confederacy is at its last gasp. American securities of all kinds are eagerly sought after, while the Confederate loan is gradually disappearing from the market.

HANDSOME PORTIONS OF PRIZE MONEYS.

Among the recent prize cases sent by the Navy Department to the Fourth Auditor of the Treasury, for the distribution of the prize money accruing to the captors, is that of the steamer Kate Dale, captured some months ago by the United States steamer E. B. Ogden. This case was condemned in the prize court at Philadelphia in November last, and a decree of distribution entered about the 1st of January, decreeing that the E. B. Ogden was the only vessel entitled to share in the said prize, and that the amount to be distributed was $385,198 12. Each seaman in this case will receive $712 77; first-class firemen, each, $1,139 93; second-class firemen, each, $987 94; coal-heavers, each, $712 77; landsmen, each, $478 10.

DESERTERS TO BE SHOT.

By order of Gen. BUTLER, privates ALBERT A. LAUT, Company H, Fourth Rhode Island Volunteers, JAMES G. GRAYSON, Company F, Eleventh Pennsylvania cavalry, and private HENRY WOODING, Company C, Eighth Connecticut Volunteers, convicted at the charge of desertion, will be shot to death with musketry, 48 hours after their sentences shall have been read to them, between the hours of 9 o'clock, A. M., and 12 M., at such place within the lines, near Portsmouth, Va., commanded by Brig.-Gen. GERRY, as shall be designated by that officer.

THE PROCLAMATION OF FREEDOM DISREGARDED.

Prominent Unionists in Kentucky complain by letter, and loudly, to the Government here, that the slaves of Kentucky are crammed with Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia slaves; that the jailors of the different counties in that State advertise for their owners to come forward, pay charges and take their property away, or the same will be sold "according to law," and that the Proclamation of Freedom to the slaves of rebels in arms in these three named States is utterly disregarded.

HOSPITAL DISCONTINUED.

By order of the Secretary of War, the hospital on Bedloe's Island, New-York harbor, is discontinued.

ACTING-MASTER GREGORY'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

The Navy Department has received a dispatch from Rear-Admiral DAHLGREN, inclosing a report from Acting Master GREGORY, commanding the brig Perry, from which it appears that three officers and twelve seamen of that vessel were captured on shore by the rebels on the 5th of December.

Acting Master GREGORY states that his untoward occurrence was the result of disobedience of his instructions by Acting Ensign WM. B. ABBATTS, who was at the time in command of a boat expedition from the Perry, and who was one of the officers captured. Mr. ABBATTS had been specially instructed to retain his men in the boats, with the exception of two or three, to be sent cautiously on shore, but chose to disregard those instructions, and land all but two of the crew of the first cutter, who were immediately surrounded by rebel cavalry and taken prisoners.

For this flagrant disobedience of orders, attended by such results, Acting Master WILLIAM B. ABBATTS is dismissed from the service. The Secretary of the Navy, in reviewing the case, says: "The Department has no wish to discourage enterprise or acts of daring, properly executed; but for a direct disobedience of orders, or for a senseless disregard of danger and of warning, without motive or purpose, and resulting in failure and public loss, no lenity can be manifested."

NEGRO REGIMENTS WANTED AT ORCE.

Maj.-Gen. PEPE has ordered his Commissaries to sell stores to the families of white and black recruits within the Newbern District at cost, for the sake of promoting enlistments.

GEN. BUTLER AWAITING THE EXCHANGE.

Gen. BUTLER has sent to Richmond his new proposition for a cartel of prisoners. No reply has been made.

GAMBLING IN GOLD TO BE STOPPED.

A new bill will soon be introduced in the House to prevent gambling in gold by heavily taxing all dealings in it for a rise or fall.

DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

THE ENROLLMENT ACT—EXEMPTIONS.

The members of both the Military Committees of Congress have received large numbers of letters, the writers volunteering suggestions or advice as to what should be the features of the amendatory enrollment bill—many of these evidently desiring it should be so framed as to exempt themselves from the draft. The bill before the Senate will probably pass that body to-morrow, and be sent to the House for concurrence. It corrects some of the faults in, and its object is to render more efficient the operation of, the present law. The only persons specially exempted from the draft are the Vice-President of the United States, the Judges of United States Courts, the heads of the several Executive Departments, and the Governors of States; and by implication such persons as are physically or mentally unfit for service, according to the prescribed army regulations. The two classes for enrollment and draft are merged into one, which is made to include persons between the ages of 20 and 45 years; credits to be given to cities, towns and wards, so as to equalize as far as possible the draft throughout each district. The commutation is increased to $400, those who pay it to be exempted from the present draft, but liable to be called upon in the next; in other words, they are in the condition of a reserved class. Drafted men may, if they prefer, be transferred to the navy, such transfer being credited to their respective localities. Alterations are made in the details of the old act for conducting the draft, and attorneys or agents are restricted to the fee of $5 for preparing the necessary exemption papers. The bill has not yet been perfected by the Senate, but it will probably pass that body with the above general features.

SURGEON-GEN. HAMMOND.

Surgeon-Gen. HAMMOND is still paralyzed from the effects of the accident with which he met while in the West. It is known that as early as Dec. 8 last he asked leave from the President and the Secretary of War a court-martial or court of inquiry, to examine the charges against him, which has not been granted. Members of the Sanitary Commission also preferred such prosecutions as a matter of justice to Surgeon-Gen. HAMMOND, in whose still and administrative powers they argument to the President their highest confidence. The charges, it is understood, are unfounded and scandalous practices in the conduct of the Medical Bureau.

CONCERNING PENSIONS.

In response to a call from the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, the Commissioner of Pensions has furnished the following report of the condition of business in his bureau, under the act of July 14, 1862:

Whole number of applications to Jan. 1, 1864	91,931
Admitted to the same date	25,600
Rejected	2,437
Suspended for evidence required or claimants	20,000
Awaiting information from Departments	12,259
Returned by Adjutant General, December 31	1,487
Sent to Adjutant General, January 1	2,494
On Examiner's desk, not acted on	7,311
Total	91,931

From these estimates it will be seen that [illegible] cases, (more than one-third of the whole number,) have been finally acted on. More than another [illegible] land, (the [illegible] of which is properly within the power of the office, are delayed by the failure of claimants or their attorneys to supply essential evidence or necessary evidence in support of the same. These cases have cost the office much more labor than those finally disposed of. The whole number on the Examiner's desk unacted on, if properly prepared and the evidence complete, would be finally adjusted in less than one month.

Gathering of Rebels at Point Pelee, Canada—Threatened Descent on Johnson's Island to Rescue Rebel Prisoners—Our Authorities Prepared for Them.

SANDUSKY, Sunday, Jan. 17.

One of W. S. PEARSON's scouts have just returned from a thorough reconnoissance toward Point Pelee, Canada. He reports two or three thousand rebels at Point Pelee, preparatory to a dash upon Johnson's Island.

Gen. H. D. TERRY has everything in readiness to receive his expected visitors properly should they venture to cross the ice. Our veterans are anxious to indulge in the novelty of a skirmish on ice.

The strictest vigilance is maintained on the island, and several batteries are in position. Point Pelee is thirty miles from Johnson's Island. The scout who brings this information is said to be a most reliable man, he having sailed on Lake Erie for twenty years.

JOHN BROWN, a son of the old hero, who resides on Put-in-Bay Island, has gone to Columbus, to induce the Government to furnish howitzers and small arms for the protection of its inhabitants. The long roll has been sounded quite often recently.

Col. BISSELL, of the Eighty-second Pennsylvania regiment, will relieve the present incompetent commander of Johnson Island to-morrow.

A REFUGEE'S ACCOUNT OF AFFAIRS IN DIXIE.

CAIRO, Sunday, Jan. 17.

The steamer Forsyth, from Memphis 14th, has arrived, with 100 bales of cotton; and the steamer Lady Franklin, with 730 bales, for Cincinnati.

A refugee from Richmond, who traveled via the Wilmington, Mobile and Ohio Railroad to Okolona, gives the Memphis Bulletin a long account of the condition of affairs in the Confederacy. He describes society in Richmond as terribly demoralized in all classes. There was a most extraordinary large number of rebel officers. There were said to be large numbers of Union men there. The same demoralization existed in Mobile.

A proposition had been made in the Rebel Congress to conscript negroes for soldiers, but it was vigorously opposed by the members from Virginia, Georgia, and South Carolina. LINCOLN's Amnesty Proclamation caused much excitement among the people and soldiers, and it was feared that many would accept it, and abandon the rebel cause. It was believed that a large majority of the troops, if left to themselves, would lay down their arms and accept the terms proposed.

Lee's army and LONGSTREET's troops were estimated at 60,000 strong.

Bishop POLK commands the Department of the Mississippi, in place of Gen. JOHNSTON, whose assumption of the command of the army was very imposing, while their denunciation of BRAGG was bitter. BRAGG's army is completely demoralized, and scattered throughout the country, and the men were deserting in large numbers. It is the intention of the rebel Government to concentrate all the forces possible at that point, check the advance of GRANT, and drive him back, if possible.

The number of rebel troops west of the Mississippi is estimated at 30,000.

Gen. S. D. LEE commands the cavalry, and has 17,000—5,000 of which are under FERGUSON, at Okolona, and 5,000 at Oxford.

Two regiments of Port Hudson prisoners have been declared exchanged, and supplied with arms. Gen. LEE's headquarters are at Brandon, Miss. Immense quantities of corn were lying along the railroad on the Alabama line.

Sixty-two rebels were sent from Memphis on the 13th, to be exchanged for some of our men taken by FORREST.

Gen. SHERMAN has gone to Vicksburgh.

No change in the Memphis Cotton market.

From California.

SAN FRANCISCO, Saturday, Jan. 16.

Arrived, ship Fairwind, from Manilla.

Sailed, Queen of the East, for Callao.

The aggregate of the week's business is large, and satisfactory to jobbers. Large sales of sugar and syrups have greatly relieved importers.

The Western Pacific Railroad is complete to San Jose, fifty miles. Cars ran over the entire route to-day, taking 2,000 passengers from this city to participate in a grand railroad celebration tendered by the people of Santa Clara County.

Railroad Accident.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sunday, Jan. 17—9 P. M.

The express train on the Pennsylvania Railroad due here to-day, met with an accident at Bridge No. 3, four miles east of Tyrone. The baggage, express and passenger cars were thrown off the track by the breaking of an axle of the tender, precipitating them into the creek below, a distance of thirty or forty feet. No lives were lost, but several were wounded. An entire train arrived here at 8 o'clock this evening with some of the injured.

Military Obsequies.

ALBANY, Sunday, Jan. 17.

The funeral obsequies of the deceased members of the Tenth regiment, who died while in the service of the United States in the Southwest, took place to-day, and were very imposing. Among those participating in the ceremonies were the Governor and staff, the Twenty-fifth and Tenth regiments, the Invalid Corps, the Fire Department, and the Fifty-first regiment, Col. LEARNED, who have reinlisted and are on their way from the West to New-York to recruit.

The False Charge Against Gen. French.

LETTER FROM MAJ.-GEN. SEDGWICK.

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH ARMY CORPS, BRANDY STATION, Jan. 12, 1864.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I have seen, in the columns of the New-York Tribune, an article in relation to the operations in the late advance to Mine Run, which is greatly unjust not only to you, but to the General commanding the Army of the Potomac. I do not recall the exact terms of the article in question, but it charged in substance that you were too much under the influence of liquor, during the battle of Locust Grove, to understand the position of affairs, and it purported to be based on a conversation had with Maj.-Gen. MEADE, while I am fully confident that no such conversation could have occurred. I nevertheless feel bound to place in your possession my emphatic testimony as to the utter falsity of the charge. I had ample opportunities of observing you during that engagement. I had been directed to support your advance, and joined you in person at the commencement of the action, and was with you for some time after its close. During all this time I saw nothing in your manner, or management of affairs, to give ground for the suspicion that you were in the slightest degree under the influence of liquor. On the contrary, the dispositions made by you of your own troops, and of such of mine as were placed at your disposal, and your own personal bearing during the action, were such as to enable me to speak with absolute certainty on the subject of the accusation to which I have referred, and to pronounce it wantonly false in every particular.

I am, very truly,

JOHN SEDGWICK, Major-General.

Maj.-Gen. PARSON, Commanding Third C.

Arrival of the Vanderbilt.

The United States steamer Vanderbilt, Capt. CHAS. H. BALDWIN, arrived at this port yesterday from St. Thomas, W. I., which port she left on the 1st inst., after an absence of upwards of a year.

The Vanderbilt left this port Jan. 16, 1863, for a purpose of cruising after the rebel privateers Alabama, Florida and Georgia. She first proceeded to Fayal; from thence cruised in the Western Ocean, and returned to Hampton Roads, where she left again in the early part of February for the West Indies, where she cruised for some time; thence to the Coast of Africa, Coast of Brazil, &c. She on one occasion arrived at one of the ports on the African coast just a few hours after the sailing of one of the privateers, which seem appear to have been well posted as to the movements of the Vanderbilt by parties at their various stopping places. In October last the Vanderbilt captured the British bark Saxon at Cape Town, which vessel had on board the cargo of the bark Conrad, of Philadelphia, captured some time previously by the Florida. She also condemned some 400 tons of coal, which had been left on one of the small islands on the African coast for the use of the privateers.

On the passage from St. Thomas to this port, and when near Nassau, sighted and gave chase to a steamer supposed to be a blockade-runner, who seeing the Vanderbilt in chase, immediately commenced throwing overboard her cargo. The Vanderbilt was compelled to give up the chase, in consequence of the bad state of her boilers; subsequently succeeded in picking up fifty-one bales of cotton, which had been thrown overboard by the steamer.

No deaths, or even a serious case of sickness, have occurred during the cruise.

The Vanderbilt came to this port for repairs to her boilers, machinery, &c., which are in a very bad condition. She lies at the Navy-yard. The following are her principal officers: Captain, C. H. Baldwin; First Lieutenant and Executive officer, J. D. Daniels; Chief Engineer, J. Germain; Acting Masters, A. N. Keith, C. E. Hawkins, S. Belden; Ensign, L. Wright.

Important Trade Mark Decision—American vs. European Watches.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.—JAN. 14.

American Watch Company vs. Th. Block & Bros.—This was an action brought by the plaintiff, a corporation engaged in manufacturing the American watch, at Waltham, near Boston, Mass., against the defendants, watch manufacturers in Switzerland, having an agency in this City. The celebrity attained by the American watch by reason of its superiority over all foreign watches in lowness of price and perfectness of time-keeping, has created a public demand which even the large resources of the factory have been unable promptly to supply. Hence an illicit manufacture has sprung up during the past year in England and on the continent, and large quantities of spurious watches, very inferior to the American watch, have been made there and, imported into this country, bearing the forged name of the American Watch Company, and also infringing their various trade marks. The general appearance of the watches which have pirated the plaintiff's trade mark, is well calculated to deceive the public and even dealers not familiar with the genuine article.

The plaintiff obtained a perpetual injunction, enjoining and restraining the defendants and their agents from using any of the plaintiff's trade marks, and especially from selling or offering for sale any watch movement not manufactured by the plaintiff, under the designation of "Wm. Ellery," (one of the plaintiff's trade marks,) or any colorable imitation of the same, and from using the words "Wm. Ellery" as a trade mark in any way, and from selling or offering for sale any watch movements whereon is engraved, stamped, pressed or otherwise made apparent the words "Wm. Ellery" or any colorable imitation thereof. Abbott & Fuller, counsel for plaintiff. Nathan Solomon for defendants.

American Watch Company vs. Charles Glatz.—The same judgment was rendered in this case, the watches sold by the defendant having the words Wm. Elbrbry, (instead of Ellery), and leaving off the word "Mass." after "Boston." Similar suits are pending in the same Court between the plaintiff and various importers and watch dealers in this City.—Evening Post.

Morton's Gold Pens are now sold at the same prices as before the commencement of the war; this is entirely owing to the Manufacturer's improvements in machinery, his present large Retail Business and Cash-in-Advance System; for, until he commenced advertising, his business was done on Credit and strictly with the Trade.

The Morton Gold Pens are the only ones sold at old prices, as the makers of all other gold pens charge the Premium on the Gold, Government Tax, &c.; but Morton has in no case changed his prices, Wholesale or Retail.

Of the great numbers sent by mail to all parts of the world during the past few years, not one in a thousand has failed to reach its destination in safety; showing that the Morton Gold Pen can be obtained by any one, in every part of the world, at the same price, postage only excepted.

Reader, you can have an enduring, always ready, and reliable Gold Pen, exactly adapted to your hand and style of writing, which will do your writing vastly cheaper than Steel Pens; and at the present almost universal High-Pressure Price of everything, you can have a Morton Gold Pen cheaper, in proportion to the labor spent upon it and material used, than any other Gold Pen in the World. If you want one, see "The Pen is Mightier than the Sword," in another column.

A Letter from Dr. E. O. Ferry.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 1, 1864.

SIR: One of the most annoying difficulties connected with the Hair and its diseases is Dandruff, in its varying phases. Its philosophy being very little understood, I will give my views on the subject for the benefit of those afflicted.

There are in the square inch of the scalp three thousand pores, for the purposes of throwing off the secretions or fluid matter that forms between the cuticle and the inner or sensitive skin. If from any cause, such as to neglect to keep the scalp clean, or from the use of gluttinous oils, the pores become partially closed, the remaining portion are overtasked, the cuticles somewhat debilitated, the pores fail to perform their functions, inasmuch as only the limpid or more etherial portions of the secretions can pass off, leaving a white, bran-like substance deposited on the scalp, called Dandruff; that is the first phase of the difficulty.

When more of the pores are closed by exhaustion, loss of the limpid secretions flow off; the deposit on the scalp assumes a yellow, sticky appearance, and is called thickened secretion. This is the second phase of dandruff. The third phase is when most of the pores are closed, the cuticle completely debilitated; none of the fluid portions of the secretions can pass off; the deposit adhered closely to the scalp, has the appearance of yellow matter, and is called matterated secretion, which invariably results in loss of hair. If at this stage of the disease it is not arrested by a proper course of treatment, it finally terminates in eczema, one of the most difficult diseases of the scalp for a physician to manage.

As to the remedy—Nature is always true to herself. If the scalp is kept clean, and the pores not glued up with oils or pomades, the secretions will pass off, and nothing of dandruff would not be formed, and people would not lose their hair. But when a difficulty of the kind does exist, it should be treated rationally. It is little use to remove the effect while the cause exists. Dandruff in its first stages is easily cured, and it should receive the earliest attention, as it is one of the primary causes of diseases of the scalp and loss of hair. For further information I can be consulted free of charge for all diseases of the scalp that destroy the hair or induce premature blanching, at my office, No. 49 Bond-st., New-York.

Yours truly,

AGAIN NEW TESTIMONY.

HEAD.

HARLEM, July 30, 1863.

I have been deaf for over TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, and Dr. VON EISENBERG operated on both of my ears without the slightest pain—a thing that I could not believe could be done. I now hear well, and feel as I never did for the last twenty years. The dexterity and skill with which the operation was performed evinced the highest practical ability. I hear perfectly. It is now over a month since the operation, and I continue to feel as well as ever.

WILLIAM LIDDLE.

DEAFNESS AND CATARRH CURED.

No. 620 SIXTH-ST., NEW-YORK, Dec. 2, 1863.

I was deaf for several years, and hearing of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I was induced to place myself under his care, and I am now happy to state that my hearing was entirely restored after a short treatment. I was also suffering from chronic catarrh, of which I was also cured by the skillful treatment of Dr. Von Eisenberg. I do but justice to the Doctor in stating that in treating me he displayed that skill and knowledge which have already procured for him such a deserved reputation, and that the principles which direct his system of curing Deafness and Catarrh are such as to render success certain, in my opinion. Many months have passed since Dr. Von Eisenberg restored my hearing, and it continues as good as ever.

C. HOPKINS.

CATARRH CURED.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 23, 1863.

I have been suffering for the last three years from a severe Catarrh, with a continual fullness in my head, a tightness across my chest, a weight over my eyes, which were weak, watery and very painful. My nostrils were continually obstructed with a pouring of fluid. I have had frequent sneezing, hoarseness of my voice, generally attended with spitting, often with a full

UNITED STATES OF COLOMBIA.

The Unsuccessful Conspiracy—Gen. Mosquera—No Fighting since the Defeat of Florez—Miscellaneous.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

PANAMA, Friday, Jan. 8, 1864.

We have news from Bogota, the capital, to the 26th ult. It appears that the Conservative conspirators, called by Mosquera, and who made Guayaquil their headquarters, had plotted on a more extensive scale than was generally supposed. It was known that they had arranged a rising of their party in Tequerres, the Pasto, in the State of Cauca, simultaneous with the invasion of those provinces by Gen. Florez, but now we find that the plot had ramifications throughout the Republic. In the rich and populous State of Antioquia, on the 7th ult., simultaneous pronunciamentos were made in small towns against the Government of the Provincial President, Gen. Mosquera. About 800 men, the leaders had collected nearly 4,000 badly armed and unarmed persons together, near the town of Aniloquia, where they were attacked by a small body of State troops, and after skirmishing and fighting for two hours, the rebels were dispersed. In the States of Santander and Boyoca similar movements, but on a smaller scale, had been made, and martial law had in consequence been proclaimed. Troops from Cartagena left, under command of Gen. Rizo, on the 1st January, for Bogota, or more to quieting the country. Señor Tamayo, who is Acting President in the absence of Gen. Mosquera, writes that these movements will give his Government but little trouble, as their foundation upon the defeat of Mosquera by Florez, and that in Antioquia the people had already mostly returned to their homes. In Medellin, the capital of the State, the Conservatives not only refused to join the conspirators, but most of them had openly given in their adhesion to Gen. Mosquera and the Liberals.

It is thought by many that the election of Señor Murillo, now Minister to Washington, to President of Colombia, will be set aside by the Congress now in session at Bogota, on the ground that he was illegally elected by the State Legislatures, instead of being elected by the people, and that General Mosquera will be continued as Provisional President for another year.

I have seen a letter to a gentleman in Panama, dated at Guayaquil, Dec. 29, which came by way of Paita, Peru, and which says that no engagement had taken place between the troops of Colombia and Ecuador since the battle of Dec. 6, on the Carabi frontier of Ecuador. This letter also gives the intelligence that the Ecuadorian naval force of 800 men, who took our port of Tumaco by surprise, abandoned it as soon as they knew of the defeat of Florez at Cuaspud, and embarked in their schooners and launches for Los Esmeraldas, in Ecuador.

It is more than probable that General Mosquera is now in Quito, and that the war is ended. About the middle of December, in the village of San Vincente, near the river Chiri, in Ecuador, he received Señor Quijano, who was sent from Ibarra by Gen. Florez to treat with him. An armistice was agreed upon, and Gen. Mosquera named Señor Antonio Gonzalez Caraso, on his part, to go to Ibarra, to make definite arrangements of peace. It is pretty well understood that Mosquera will accept nothing less than the incorporation of Ecuador as a portion of Colombia, and it is not at all unlikely that General Florez will throw President Garcia Moreno overboard, and agree to Mosquera's demands.

An officer of Gen. Florez gives the number of Colombians who fought at Cuaspud at only 2,000, while Florez had 5,000 men. Of the Ecuadorian force not more than one quarter escaped. Two thousand of them were taken prisoners. The loss in killed and wounded on both sides was only 300 men. Mosquera forced his troops to respect private property, and to return all the baggage of the latter that he had captured, expressing deep anxiety on account of the wounds he had received, and not even all his prisoners, but not until they had given their parole not to fight again in this war. He also made them sign a petition for the establishment of the old Republic of Colombia.

Col. Davalos, of the Ecuadorian army, who was supposed to be with Gen. Erazo in the rear of Mosquera, has surrendered his 500 cavalry to the latter. It is also reported, but not certain, that Gen. Erazo, with his 1,500 men, had asked mercy from Mosquera.

A great deal of correspondence has been captured by Mosquera's forces, showing that a very extensive plot existed for the overthrow of the present Colombian administration, and many arrests of prominent persons will follow. At Cartagena, Gen. Nieto had seized the Panama correspondence for the purpose of intercepting the Colombian news.

I mentioned in my letter of yesterday to his enemies on the Isthmus of Panama, and made him many friends in Ecuador, and discovered much of the bitter feeling that previously existed against him. The Ecuadorian Government was without men or money. Mosquera had demanded an appropriation from the Congress of Ecuador of $700,000 on account of the Ecuadorian debt to Colombia, and Señor [illegible] said that Mosquera would next try his hand on Peru, after settling the business of Ecuador. It is probable, however, that Venezuela will must lost his iron hand.

AMUSEMENTS.

A positive novelty is offered to-night at the Academy of Music. This is Herman Wagner's much-talked-of opera of the "Tannhauser." The following is a synopsis of the plot:

First Act.—Tannhauser, a celebrated singer, of the eleventh century, is discovered in the Cave of Venus, living in the enjoyment of an impure love with the goddess Venus. Wearying of it, he longs for the earth, and entreats Venus to fulfill his desire. She does so on the condition that he will sing only of love, enjoyed with her. The scene changes to a castle of Wartburg, where the Prince Regent, who is just on a hunting tour, in company with his friends, recognizes Tannhauser, and invites him to join the Prize Festival at the Wartburg.

Second Act.—Tannhauser enters and greets the Prince Regent and his niece Elisabeth, who is already secretly in love with him. Shortly after the invited Princes and guests arrive, for the singing festival, where Tannhauser hopes to be the victor. Instead of singing songs of true love, he sings of the enjoyments with Venus, which he had himself at the cave of that goddess, and consequently he is banished by the Prince Regent. Elisabeth interferes, and begs that Tannhauser may be allowed to join the Pilgrims, who are on their way to Rome, to get absolution of their sins from the Pope.

Third Act.—Return of the Pilgrims from Rome. Elisabeth seeking in vain amongst them for Tannhauser. Not seeing him, she dies, broken-hearted. Soon after, Tannhauser arrives, and, seeing Wolfram, reveals to him his hardships on his travel from Rome, and that the Pope would not listen to a pardon. He looks for the Cave of Venus, to return thither, but Wolfram tells him not to go, and explains the silent love of Elisabeth, who is just borne to the grave. Tannhauser, upon seeing the body of his beloved, dies, uttering the words, "Holy Elisabeth, pray for me!"

In the performance of this opera, all the artists of Mr. Arcuchta's troupe will take part. The orchestra has been increased, and under the able baton of Mr. Carl Bergmann, will interpret the instrumental part with brilliancy. The chorus has been reinforced with the Arion Society. There is every prospect of a remarkable performance.

Messrs. Mason and Thomas gave their first series of chamber-music, at Bodworth's Saloon, on Tuesday evening. We were unable to attend, but from reliable sources we hear that the execution of the various pieces on the programme was all that conscientious study and technical ability could effect, or the most exacting taste demand.

The Harrison English Opera troupe gave two performances of the "Bohemian Girl" at Niblo's Saloon last week, both with immense success. The singers have vastly improved, and the orchestra and chorus were alike vigorous and excellent. We find the following sensible remarks in the Musical Review and World, and we quote them as an indication of the attention English opera is now attracting in art circles:

"There are no exclusively Italian operas any more, as little as there are exclusively Italian singers. The Germans, the English, the French, the Americans, the Russians have conquered the Italian stage, and the Italian theatre has seem to be quite satisfied with the concessions made to them, by adopting their language as the means of illustration. Now, could not this be also done with the English language? The Germans sing in their own country Italian, English, French operas in German; why must we sing, or rather listen, to Italian alone? English opera ought to be the opera, the rule, while any other should not be but the exception, just as it is in Germany and France. This seems to us sensible and just, and eminently fit to cause a general real understanding of dramatic musical art, while the patronage of operatic performances in a language, which is only understood by the few, must necessarily produce a want of appreciation of all, what constitutes dramatic music. Let us first have an opera, sung in the English language, never mind, whether it belongs to the Italian, French or German school, and we shall soon have a school of our own. As to the singers, they will not fail to make their appearance. Our Italian Opera is already graced by one of American birth, gifted as any that ever came from a foreign land, and perhaps in no other city of the world could be found so much talent for singing as in New-York. The English opera company now performing in the Park Theatre in Brooklyn is another proof, that we are not wanting in talents for this class of entertainment. Mme. Bostwick and Messrs. Castle and Campbell have excellent, in many respects superior qualities for their tasks, and we are confident, if English opera should be only properly cultivated, and its importance well brought before the public, that in a short time a very valuable company could be recruited from the professional singers, now living among us. English opera ought not be neglected in this country, for it will do more toward cultivating the taste for music of the masses, than anything else."

The routine of Mr. Barney Williams' performance of the "Connie Scough" was agreeably relieved, one night last week, by a modest and characteristic little speech which that gentleman was kind enough to make before the curtain. It was not our good fortune to be present. We are pained, indeed, to say that we have never heard Mr. Barney Williams make a speech, but, judging from this effort he must be an attractive orator. The only sensation that we ever remember him to have made—and our memory takes us back in an instant to the happy period of his obscurity—was on this occasion. By one of those accidents that sometimes occur, he succeeded in saying some thing worthy of criticism. That our reader may understand the pleasantry of the thing, we will remember that Mr. Barney Williams has recently purchased a new American play. He is naturally and properly proud of the enterprise, and flutters with the same sort of cackling fondness for his treasure that a hen with one chick is supposed to exhibit toward her limited and highly exaggerated offspring. Let us not be unjust to Mr. Barney Williams. He has several other plays. Do we not see him every year, and yawn, and wonder what is Fate and Eternity, and future punishment, and the object of virtue (in the absence of Whisky) when such things can be without overcoming us like a wet blanket? But of American plays Mr. Williams has not until now been the special and peculiar patron. Well, then this new play the "Connie Scough," by Mr. Dion Boucicault, was brought on last week. It obtained a moderate success, which we did not fail to record. But—such is the frailty of human nature—we neglected to ascribe that success to Mr. Barney Williams. Indeed, we did not hesitate to affirm in the heathcock of long impunity, that the faults of the work arose mainly from the necessity that the author experienced of keeping this one actor constantly before the audience. In other words, we rudely implied and now distinctly affirm that the piece would have been better if the part played by Mr. Barney Williams had been left out altogether. Upon this the player makes a speech. He takes the critic—to speak figuratively—by the scruff of the neck, and flagellates him, before people. This open-hearted, warm-hearted, highly-cultivated Mazeppa says that the critic (or reporter, as he was civil enough to call them to show his breeding) attacked the play, not because it was of a very ordinary sort, but because the author happens to be an American, and was, therefore, an object of just loathing and detestation to every man except an Irishman.

We shall not waste words in refuting a statement that is as mendacious as it is puerile. Journalism deals liberally with all matters of art; have liberally, Mr. Barney Williams, who has designed a position through its interference, may well know. The record of this particular sheet is clear. It has consistently, emphatically, and vehemently eulogized all things or occurrences in the highest sphere of art, and it has not failed, whenever them, to every deprived, or pocket, of the humblest when a vital principle underwrote to [illegible]
